

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

TO TEACHERS.

THE series of ETYMOLOGICAL CLASS-BOOKS, of which this volume forms a part, consists of the following works:—

1. LYND'S FIRST BOOK OF ETYMOLOGY: pp. 215, large 12mo,—or THOMAS'S FIRST BOOK OF ETYMOLOGY, on the basis of the work by Mr. LYND, and containing many improvements on the former work: pp. 261, large 12mo. See description of the work below.

2. LYND'S CLASS-BOOK OF ETYMOLOGY, enlarged and improved by Dr. J. THOMAS: pp. 348, large 12mo. See description below.

3. OSWALD'S ETYMOLOGICAL DICTIONARY.

The most substantial evidence of the popularity of the above-named works,—in the estimation of the publishers,—is that they have sold more than fifty thousand volumes of the series, and that the demand for them is steadily increasing.

The leading features of “Thomas's First Book of Etymology” may be briefly stated thus:—

1. The nature of roots, prefixes and suffixes, and the distinction between primitive and derivative, simple and compound words, are explained.

2. The prefixes and suffixes of Latin, Greek, and other origin are given, and their various meanings fully and clearly stated and explained.

3. Exercises are given, designed primarily to impress on the mind of the pupil the various meanings of the prefixes and suffixes, and also to introduce to the analysis of the words of our language generally.

4. The principal Latin, Greek, and other roots of our language, arranged in alphabetical order, are inserted; and under each is placed the more important English words derived therefrom, with the literal or etymological meaning, and the proper or usually accepted meaning of each derivative affixed to it.

5. A Key is appended, referring every English word in the preceding vocabulary to its appropriate Latin, Greek, or other root, and thus enabling the pupil who is wholly unacquainted with any language other than our native tongue to pursue the study of English etymology without difficulty.

6. Throughout the work, distinctive kinds of type are used to designate clearly the particular portion of the definition of each English derivative corresponding with the root, prefix, and suffix, or such of them as compose the derivative; and copious notes are appended, by which, and the distinctive types just referred to, the connection between the literal or etymological and the proper or usually accepted meaning of the English derivatives is traced and fully explained. These two important features, thus fully carried out, it is believed are peculiar to this work, and add much to its value.

The contents of the improved edition of “Lynd's Class-Book of Etymology” are as follows:—

1. Introductory chapter, on the origin of language, and the rise and progress of the English language: pp. 18.

2. Part I., on the Prefixes and Suffixes of the English language. By Dr. Thomas: pp. 20.

3. Part II. contains the principal Latin, Greek, and other roots of the English language, arranged in alphabetical order, with a large proportion of the English words derived from each placed under it and defined: pp. 164.

This part of the work contains a considerably larger number of derivatives and roots than the corresponding part of “Thomas's First Book of Etymology.”

4. Part III., on English words principally of Gothic origin, (pp. 36)—contains about one thousand words of the class designated, and, it is believed, will be found interesting and profitable to the pupil.

5. Part IV., on English words derived from the Latin through the French: (pp. 8)—is intended for the study of the advanced pupils.

6. Part V. is a carefully prepared table of English Synonymes, (pp. 44,) which will be found essentially to aid the pupil in his exercises in English composition.

7. A Key, referring each of the thirty thousand English derivative words contained in “Oswald's Etymological Dictionary” to its appropriate Latin, Greek, or other root.

Entered according to Act of Congress, in the year 1852, by

in the Clerk's Office of the District Court of the United States in and for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania.

PREFACE

TO THE ENGLISH EDITION.

THE compiler of the following work proposed to himself chiefly to meet the difficulty under which those unacquainted with the learned languages necessarily labour, in ascertaining with clearness and precision, the true and radical signification of words derived from foreign tongues. In consulting our popular dictionaries, the young and unlettered find themselves much embarrassed, at one time, by numerous and philosophical definitions given in explanation of some simple vocable; at another, by finding a word defined by another equally difficult to understand, and which, on being turned up, refers them again to that, the meaning of which they are in quest of. It is needless to state that such embarrassments must greatly tend to cool the ardor, and repress the aspiring efforts of the young mind in the pursuit of knowledge.

He also conceived that, by presenting the words of the language arranged according to their genera, and under their respective roots, he would abridge and facilitate the labours both of teacher and pupil.

The principle on which the work has been constructed, brings into full operation the pupil's powers of discrimination and judgment; and while it awakens interest, and excites curiosity, he unconsciously acquires those elementary ideas of vocables, which will guide him in the proper and legitimate application of them.

The languages from which by far the greater proportion of English words now in use originally come, are Greek and Latin. The compiler has intentionally abstained from introducing words of Saxon origin. These properly constitute our mother tongue; and as they in general express simple ideas, and are familiar to us from our infancy, it appeared to him that their admission would have swelled the work to an inconvenient size. With the exception, therefore, of the prefixes and postfixes, they are omitted. Words borrowed from the French, Spanish, and modern Italian, being derived chiefly from Latin roots,—though much altered, both in orthography and inflection,—are in general inserted under the Latin primitives.

When the usual acceptation of a word differs from its literal, the peculiarity is generally explained in the notes, in which the interpretations of Johnson and Webster are generally adopted; and in every word of extensive use, it was judged requisite to mark the progress of its meaning, and show by what gradations it has passed from its primitive to its remote and accidental signification. “In most cases,” says Webster, “this change consists in a slight deflection, or difference of application, which has obtained among different families of the same stock. In some cases, the literal sense is lost or obscured, and the figurative only is retained. The first object, in such cases, is to find the primary or literal sense, from which the various particular applications may be easily deduced.” These nicer shades of the common meaning, which distinguish the different periods in the history of language, are discoverable only by a careful attention to the general scope of the passage.

Many scientific and technical terms now in use, have been traced to their source, and defined in their restricted or appropriate application.

Obsolete words have also been admitted, when they are found in standard works, or when they possess such a degree of force and beauty as may render them deserving of revival.

As the prepositions or prefixes in all languages constitute an important class of vocables, being used in composition to vary the sense of other parts of speech to an unlimited extent, it was deemed useful to give them a particular consideration. The first forty pages are occupied in illustrating and arranging them according to their respective languages. Every word, or one of each class in which the prefixes occur, has been given. Another important genus of vocables are the affixes or terminations. Accordingly, particular care has been taken, and a new plan adopted, to determine their precise import. They have been alphabetically classified and arranged according to the modification of noun, adjective, verb, and adverb. By means of an accurate knowledge of the prefix and postfix, together with the root, the primary or radical signification of the word may be easily ascertained, as well as the elements of the figurative meaning detected.

This method must greatly facilitate the acquisition of our vernacular tongue to foreigners, as well as to our own countrymen, and may in some degree rescue it from the mischievous influence of sciolists, and from that overweening spirit of innovation, which is perpetually disturbing its settled usages, and filling it with anomalies.

As the plan on which the following dictionary is compiled, differs materially from that of every preceding one, a few explanatory examples may be necessary to illustrate its principle, and exhibit the manner in which it may be used in tuition. Suppose the word 'attraction' should occur, the pupil may be asked, What is the literal meaning of the word 'attraction?' He will answer, 'a drawing to,' or 'the act or power of drawing to.' From what is it derived? 'Attract.'—What does the first syllable or prefix 'at,' of that word signify? 'To.' (See 'at,' page 24.)—Give some other example of that prefix. 'Attain, attend, attribute,' &c.—What was its original form? 'Ad.' (See 'ad' and its forms, p. 23.) Here the pupil may be called upon to give the other forms of 'ad,' viz.—a, ac, af, ag, al, an, ap, ar, as,—with an example of each; such as aspire, accede, affix, aggravate, alleviate, annihilate, append, arrogate, assimilate.—What does the last syllable or postfix 'ion,' of that word denote? 'The act of,' or 'ing.' (See 'ion,' p. 45.)—Give some other examples of that affix having the same signification. 'Contribution, collision, dissolution, commotion,' &c. (See these and other examples, p. 45.)—What is the root or theme of that word 'attraction?' 'Tract.'—What does it signify? 'Draw.' (See 'tractum,' to draw, p. 469, which refers to 'trahō,' p. 469, where the word 'attraction' is to be found. See also note under 'gravitation,' p. 170.) Here, in alphabetical order or otherwise, the other words derived from 'tract' may be elicited. Some such interrogatories as the following may be put by the teacher. Give a word signifying to draw from. The pupil will answer, 'Abstract.' (See 'abs,' p. 23)—Having power to draw to? 'Attractive.' ('at,' p. 24, and 'ive,' p. 53.)—To draw together? 'Contract.' ('con,' p. 25.)—To draw from or down? 'Distract.' ('dis,' p. 28.)—To draw out? 'Extract.' ('ex,' p. 28.)—That cannot be drawn or managed? 'Intractable.' ('in,' p. 29, and 'ble,' p. 51.)—To draw forth, or to prolong? 'Protract.' ('pro,' p. 31.)—To draw back? 'Retract.' ('re,' p. 32.)—To draw under or from? 'Subtract.' ('sub,' p. 32.)—A mark left by something passing, or a vestige? 'Trace.' (p. 471.)—A beaten path? 'Track.'—A portion of land, also a treatise? 'Tract.'—That may be drawn out in length?

'Tractile.' ('ile,' p. 52.)—A trailing vehicle, or sledge? 'Traineau.'—The other words derived from, or connected with these, may also be asked. The preceding process might, with advantage, be varied or reversed; the teacher giving the word, and requesting the pupil to state its meaning, or the pupil may be called upon to mention some or all the words derived from that root.

Interrogated in this manner, the pupil would soon acquire an accurate knowledge of any genus or class of vocables.

Suppose, again, the word 'animate' should occur. What does that word signify? 'To give life.'—Has it any other meaning? 'Having life.'—What part of that word denotes to give? 'Ate.' ('ate,' p. 55.)—Has the affix 'ate,' when annexed to verbs, any other meaning? 'To make.' (p. 55.)—Give some examples of that termination having this signification. 'Abbreviate, antiquate, frustrate, renovate, &c.—When 'ate' is subjoined to adjectives, what does it denote? 'Having' or 'being.' ('ate,' p. 50.)—Give examples. 'Inanimate, affectionate, adequate, situate, &c.—When 'ate' is affixed to nouns, what does it denote? 'One who,' or 'the person who.' ('ate,' p. 39.)—State some examples. 'Advocate, associate, potentate, primate,' &c.—What part of the word 'animate' signifies life? 'Anim.' ('anima,' p. 65.)—State another example. 'Inanimate.'—What does 'inanimate' imply? 'Not having life.' ('in,' p. 30, and 'ate,' p. 50.)—Proceeding farther in the investigation, some such questions as the following may be put. A living creature? 'Animal.'—A little animal? 'Animalcule.' ('cle,' p. 43.)—The state of being lively, or life? 'Animation.' ('ion,' p. 45.)—Mention another word of a similar import. 'Vitality.' ('vivo,' p. 515).—Here the words under 'vivo,' being of similar meaning, may also be given. Being out of life, or lifeless? ‘Exanimate.’ (p. 28 & 50.)—To give life again? ‘Reanimate.’ (p. 32 & 55.)—Does the root ‘anim’ bear any other import? ‘Mind.’ (‘animus,’ p. 65.)—Give an example. Animadvert.—What does animadvert signify? ‘To turn the mind to, to criticise.’ What part of that word denotes ‘to?’ ‘Ad.’ (p. 23.)—What part imports ‘turn?’ ‘Vert.’ (‘verto,’ p. 500.)—Here an opportunity is afforded of exercising the pupil on the derivatives of ‘verto.’ A strong active feeling of the mind, or hatred? ‘Animosity.’—The being of equal mind, or equalness of mind? ‘Equanimity.’ (‘equus’ for ‘æquus,’ p. 124, & ‘ty,’ p. 45.)—The being of great mind, or greatness of mind? ‘Magnanimity.’ (‘magnus,’ p. 222.)—The being of little mind, or littleness of mind? ‘Pusillanimity.’ (‘pusillus,’ p. 353.)—The being of one mind, or oneness of mind? ‘Unanimity.’ (‘unus,’ p. 484.)

One example more may be taken. Suppose the word ‘geography’ should occur. What is the literal meaning of that word? ‘A description of the earth or world.’—Whether is it simple or compound?—‘Compound.’—Of what is it compounded? ‘Ge,’ the earth, (p. 158,) and ‘Grapho,’ to describe, (p. 167.) It may be proper to state that the letter ‘o,’ which intervenes between the ‘ge,’ and ‘graphy,’ is euphonic, and is usually inserted between the two component or radical parts, of which words derived from Greek are compounded.—One who describes the earth or world? ‘Geographer.’ (‘er,’ p. 40.)—Pertaining to geography? ‘Geographical.’ (‘al,’ and ‘ical,’ p. 49.)—The other words from ‘Ge,’ (p. 158) may be asked, as well as those derived from Terra, (p. 455,) being the corresponding term in Latin, denoting earth. A few also of those derived from ‘Grapho’ may be taken.

THE accent is the more forcible utterance of a particular syllable of a word. And on the final letter of that syllable, the accent is uniformly placed. In the word collisi'on, for example, the accent is marked on the terminating letter 'i' of the accented syllable 'lisi,' which is pronounced lizh; and the whole word, kol-lizh'-un.

INTRODUCTION

BY THE AMERICAN EDITOR

In the business of Practical Education, mind is the constant subject upon which we operate. In a book, then, like the present, intended for the purpose of teaching the English Language by analysing the structure of our words, it seems at least reasonable, if not indispensable, that some observations on the powers of the mind, and the mode of their developement by language, with the application of those principles in the practice of instruction, should form an introductory department to the work.

With these views we shall present, with as much brevity as may be appropriate to our design, some elementary notices of the operations of the mind, infer some practical principles, examine the relation of these principles to language, and then proceed to offer a practical method of using this work in accordance with the doctrines laid down.

When we examine the nature of our thoughts, we find that they consist of a recurrence to our minds of what we have seen, heard, tasted, smelled, or felt, and mental combinations and judgments concerning those things. Of the truth of this position every one must be convinced, who has paid only a slight attention to the operations of his own mind.

An idea; then, is nothing more than a mental perception of an absent object, its qualities or actions; or it is the mental repetition of our sensations.

If our ideas are derived from our sensations, the primary business of Intellectual Education should be the cultivation and strengthening of the senses, and the perceptive power through them. This would lay the foundation for subsequent acquirements.

the perceptive power we mean the faculty by which the mind is conscious of the various sensations communicated through the organs of sense. By the faculty of attention we give direction to our percipient power, and are capable of holding an object before our mind, so as to examine it minutely. The faculty of attention becomes, from this circumstance, the medium of furnishing our memory, judgment, and reasoning power with the materials upon which they may operate. If we are capable of fixing our attention vigorously, our memory and judgment will necessarily possess similar vigour. If, on the contrary, we possess but little power to direct and fix our attention, our memory and judgment will exhibit the same debility. To acquire a habit, therefore, of fixing our attention steadily and undividedly on any object of thought, so as to trace out all its attributes and relations, is a matter of the greatest moment in a good system of intellectual discipline.

The cultivation of our senses by a course of suitable exercises invigorates the power of attention. The senses that should be particularly exercised are those of sight and touch. The reason why these two senses should receive the greatest cultivation, is, that the sensations acquired by them form the pivot upon which all the other sensations revolve. It is through touch that we receive our ideas of space and location; and these ideas of space and location as they exist in the perceptive faculty, constitute the substratum on which all our sensations rest. They perform the part of the canvas, on which our imagination paints all her pictures and scenes. And it is in this way that space and location become the great foundation for memory; for, without the aid of those elementary ideas, it would be the next thing to impossible to improve, or even to retain our faculty of reminiscence.

But although our ideas of space and location are originated by the sense of touch, they are very soon transferred by association to the sense of seeing, in every human being who has the use of his eyes. The infinite variety and pleasing appearance of colours, may have a great influence in giving sight such a predominant superiority over the sense of touch. Whatever may be the cause, it is, nevertheless, an undoubted fact, that sight is the overwhelming sense, and that it bears off with it all the other sensations of taste, smell, hearing, and even touch itself.

From what has been said, we may venture the position, that we think in pictures and scenes. That this is true, is evident from the terms used in all languages to express our intellectual operations, as well as from the simple reflections of our own minds. To exemplify the correctness of our views with regard to the influence of ocular perception and location in arresting attention and securing mental retention, we need only refer to the art of Mnemonics; an art whose sole dependence is upon the visible imagery and symbols which it calls to its assistance. The surprising instances which some teachers of this art give us of persons remembering long and difficult series of events, can all be explained on this principle. In our every-day experience also we perceive the great tenaciousness of our memory whenever we associate visible scenes, or symbols and places, with ideas of any kind.

The method of teaching the deaf and dumb may likewise be brought forward as evidence in proof of the effect of visual sensation and location on the memory. In teaching these persons, every thing must be pictorial, scenic, and pantomimic; and this is the reason why they learn so fast and remember so well.

The more we reduce all our knowledge to this form, the more perfectly will it be remembered. This truth should, therefore, be made a leading principle in the education of the intellectual faculties. So far as it has been applied, it has displayed the most valuable results. Every teacher is acquainted with the importance of counters in teaching Arithmetic, of maps in teaching Geography, and of charts on the plan of Le Sage and Priestley in giving an accurate knowledge of History and Biography. Historical paintings, also, become the nuclei for concentrating and fixing thousands of ideas, which, without their aid, would be as evanescent as a wasting cloud. In Natural Philosophy and Chemistry, also, the experiments, apparatus and associations of the lecture-room, form the scenery in which our scientific ideas permanently reside. The same may be said of all the Natural Sciences; and the view may be extended even to Ethics, and the most abstruse of what are called the Abstract Sciences. For we can have no distinct idea of the meaning of the terms good, bad, honest, fraudulent, benevolent, &c., without identifying these words with scenic actions exhibiting those attributes of moral character.

Following out these views in a course of practical education, we ought to make all nature a tablet of Mnemonic Symbols, with which we might naturally associate their appropriate ideas. All the scenic ideas thus located would form a world of experimental facts to supply us with funds in our generalization of principles; or in other words, in the construction of our systems of science.

There are two intellectual operations which should be continually kept in exercise in a course of mental training. These are generalization and analysis. By generalization we mean the classification of objects by some resemblance in some of their parts or attributes. By analysis is meant the examination of an individual object, for the purpose of separating it into its different parts, and noticing its various properties and actions. Correct and minute analysis becomes the source of accurate generalization; and generalization is the origin of all the sciences. These two processes constitute, in the hands of a skilful teacher, a most important means of exercising the pupil's mind and increasing his store of knowledge. Analysis cultivates the faculty of attention, and renders the memory tenacious. Generalization has a similar effect on our powers of recollection by connecting to one point or principle a vast variety of useful facts existing in different subjects.

In conducting a series of Analyses and Classifications with a pupil, we shall derive much advantage from questions. Interrogatories fix the attention, and by that means strengthen it. It is in this way that the interrogatory system lately brought into use in Europe and this country, has been attended with such valuable results. This is properly the method of the ancients revived. Their most efficient instructors taught on this plan: and the categories of Aristotle can be considered useful in no other light, than as they are the means of investigating a subject by a course of interrogatories, and thus arresting the attention and securing knowledge.

As language is the medium through which knowledge is communicated, it may be proper to examine the office of words with reference to the theory we have given of the thinking process.

Words stand either for whole objects or for parts; for whole scenes, or for some portion or action in a scene. Thus, the word body represents a whole consisting of many parts, as, the head, trunk, extremities; and the term head includes in it the ideas represented by face, forehead, eyes, ears, nose, mouth, &c. So journey, voyage, vintage, harvest, represent scenes, or rather series of scenic actions, as portions of the whole, which can be expressed by subordinate terms. And as language would be imperfect if we had only words for objects and scenes, it was found necessary to be more minute, and hence we have a vocabulary furnishing the means of describing specific actions and qualities.

Words then, being used not only as signs for whole objects and their parts, but also for their qualities, actions and uses, become, as Condillac observes, our most useful instruments of analysis. They are, from the same circumstance, equally the instrument of generalization. The minute appropriation of terms concentrates attention by limiting the range of mental vision, and thus insures accuracy of thought.

When we look at words in this light, as the means by which we communicate our thoughts to one another, we may compare them to the pencil of the painter. Each word traces out in the imagination of the hearer, either the whole of an object, or some part, or quality, or action. All the elementary images and scenes exist in a latent state, in the mind of the hearer; and the speaker by a successive analysis of his pictures and scenes, by means of words, raises the same in the mind of the hearer. If the hearer or reader can readily realize or embody the scenery presented by words, he is said to understand the speaker or author; and if not, the language is said to be unintelligible.

It is this ability to excite in the minds of others, by means of words, a train of ideas similar to what is passing in our own minds, that peculiarly distinguishes man from the brute creation, and enables him to improve his condition and become a social and civilized being. The state and progress of civilization in any nation, is uniformly indicated by the number of their terms and the correctness of their application. Schlegel, in his History of Literature, remarks, that "there is no impiety in saying, that it was scarcely in the power of the Derry to confer on man a more glorious present than language, by which He himself is revealed to us, and which at once affords the strongest bond of union and the best instrument of communication." "So inseparable indeed," continues he, "are mind and speech, so identically one are thought and language, that although we must always hold reason as the greatest characteristic and peculiar attribute of man; yet language, when we regard its original object and intrinsic dignity, is well entitled to be considered as a component part of the intellectual structure of our being."

We shall now notice briefly the beneficial effects of words on the human understanding, as evinced in the manner in which they improve the powers of attention, memory, judgment, and reasoning.

We have before taken notice of some circumstances influencing the faculty of attention, and observed that its perfection consists in our ability to fix it steadily on any point of inquiry. It is imperfect also in proportion as it is unsteady, and this unsteadiness is one of the greatest obstacles to our progress in knowledge. A child, before it can speak or understand well what is said to it, is a striking example of this want of fixity. Its attention is ever veering, and its knowledge is then extremely limited. But so soon as it is able to use words, it acquires such a power of directing its attention to its own ideas, and the objects represented by words, that it surprises us by the acquirements it makes during the first year after it begins to talk.

Words oblige the mind to fix itself and to proceed more regularly and slowly than it could without them; and this regularity insures the soundest progress. Language in this sense may be called a bridle to the roving mind; and on this account, it may be useful to man as a solitary being as well as a member of society. We can thus readily perceive how the use of words trains the faculty of attention.

The memory is that power of the mind by which we are capable of retaining our perceptions, or of resuscitating them at will. This faculty is stronger or weaker in proportion as it is capable of bringing forward many or few ideas, or as these are correct or incorrect, distinct or confused. It is dependent on the power of attention as well for its accuracy as for its vigor. The memory can be improved to a surprising extent, and this chiefly by the effect which repetition has in commanding renewed attention to the same idea, and thus making a more permanent impression. Here words begin to assume their true office, and become in reality the instruments by which the mind carries on its thinking process. We would not, with some metaphysicians, go so far as to say, that we can not think without words; but we feel ourselves authorised in asserting, that they are the memorandums of our ideas, and are absolutely necessary to us for retaining the greater portion of our thoughts. By means of language we can tie down to a word, an idea, which can at any time be recalled, and which would otherwise be as evanescent as our breath. When we refer to our own experience, we shall soon perceive how many ideas lie dormant in the mind until brought into active existence by words! How often does a traveller, in passing through a country abounding with all the beauties of nature, and art, find that his reminiscences are very faint until he has clothed them in language! Immediately, they assume a permanence of which he was not before aware. How frequently also does the poet, in describing the most familiar scenes in the natural and moral world, please and surprise us by simply individualising and identifying all our previous ideas by words! It cannot be said that he gives a single new image, but he really presents us with another sight of the same pleasing objects. The attention is directed to them, and the remembrance of them becomes more perfect and agreeable.

By our judging faculty we perceive the resemblances and differences among our thoughts. In order to judge rightly of things which are subjected to our senses, we need only possess a proper command of attention. But to form correct judgments on subjects which are not under our immediate observation, we need accuracy of memory as well as fixity of attention. Here is seen the great value of these two fundamental faculties of the mind. We have already seen that they are very much improved by language, and our judgment must necessarily be improved by the same means. Words being the representatives of our ideas, precision and propriety in the use of them, must necessarily imply a similar precision and discrimination among our thoughts. An attention, therefore, to the true meaning of words must tend to improve our judgment. In examining, for instance, the difference or similarity of signification of two words, we are obliged to attach certain ideas to the one, or to separate certain ideas from the other. This is an exercise implying the exertion of both attention and memory. Thus, language, as we advance in a knowledge of it, affords one of the best means of strengthening this most valuable power of the human understanding, and its acquisition may be made, by a rational mode of teaching, one of the best introductions to the study of the science of Logic.

Reasoning may be said to be a train of judgments; the subsequent ones depending on their antecedents for their correctness and value. They are the links of which reasoning is the chain—a chain which, considered either as a whole or in its various parts, owes its strength to the mysterious agency of words. The capability to reason well, must depend on the number and accuracy of the discriminations we make among our ideas. Precision, then, in the definition of our terms, is a prerequisite to good reasoning. This is exemplified in the correctness of mathematical demonstrations; for here every word has a definite meaning, and by this means prevents misapprehension or prevarication. In speaking on precision in the use of words, Condillac justly observes, "that a correct language and good reasoning are inseparably connected;" and a proper study of it, by leading us to examine into the true meaning and right application of words, will furnish a fund, from which we may draw, as occasion may require, for conducting all the various investigations in which we may be engaged.

Having thus briefly stated the manner in which we conceive that words invigorate the mental powers, we shall next present several subdivisions of the subject of Language, and add a few remarks of a practical nature on them.

One division of language may be into Oral and Written, and another into Common Language and Terminology, or the terms employed in the arrangements and reasonings of the different sciences.

Oral Language is of every day use, and indispensable to man as a social being. By its means, the infant mind is trained to order and thinking. It is peculiarly adapted to early education; and children until they are six years of age should be taught entirely by oral instruction.

But, however valuable oral language may be, we find that nations who have advanced no farther than the use of audible signs of ideas, have never made any great progress in civilization. Hence the art of representing our thoughts by visible signs, may indeed be called "the greatest and most important discovery of human ingenuity." The art of writing has this great advantage over oral language, that it is not confined by time nor space. By its instrumentality, the experience and wisdom of past ages can be rendered subservient to the improvement of all succeeding time. Spoken language serves the present purpose and the present time, and "perishes in the using;" but written language gives to the airy beings of our minds, not only "a name, but a local habitation."

But to give these views a truly practical bearing, we would observe, that the acquisition of the habit of committing our thoughts to paper, is a matter of the greatest importance to civilized man, and ought to be the paramount object of a school education. The pen has a still greater influence in regulating the mental powers than speech, by the slowness and order which it obliges us to pursue in combining our ideas. Our conclusions will be the result of a longer attention to the objects under consideration, and, consequently, will be more likely to be true. Beside the regularity which the practice of composition introduces into the mind, there is an additional reason for making it an early part of a scholastic course; and that is, if it is not commenced before the age of twelve or fifteen, it will be much more difficult to acquire the art of readily penning our thoughts afterwards. The reason of this will be obvious, when we reflect that no two actions can be performed at one and the same time, unless they have been long rendered easy by previously established habit. The habit of thinking and speaking at once, commences in the first efforts of a child to lisp its words. But the habit of thinking and writing at the same time, is acquired by very few indeed, so as to be performed with a desirable facility or freedom from constraint. The only reason that we can assign for this deficiency, which obtains so generally, is that children are not early taught to put their ideas on paper, so as to establish as perfectly the association of the process of thinking and writing, as that of thinking and talking; and in after-life, they are scarcely ever able to form the habit.

We frequently meet with persons who can dictate a letter to another with ease, but the moment they attempt to combine the motion of their pen with the exercise of their thoughts, all their arrangements become confused, and they are incapable of effecting their intentions at all to their satisfaction.

May we not hence explain how it has happened that many men of great natural genius and inventive powers, have not left behind them any written traces of their superiority to the common mass of mankind? They may have laboured under the magic spell of this incurable embarrassment. We, likewise, sometimes see a man who, in the pulpit, or at the bar, shall bear his willing hearers' feelings with him; who shall please, as well by the propriety of his arguments, as by the elegance of his diction, and the beauty of his figures; and yet, this man shall not be able to pen any one of his fine extemporary efforts, so as to please either himself or his most flattering admirers.

When we view the practice of composition in the light in which these circumstances place it, it assumes an importance, as a school exercise, second to none in the whole course of Intellectual Education. It is much to be regretted that written compositions are so generally neglected in our schools for younger pupils, and not commenced until they have nearly passed the age at which new habits are easily formed. By this neglect, much of their usefulness to society and themselves may be forever prevented.

Our other division of language, was, into Common and Technical. By the Common Language may be understood, the words in daily use on the miscellaneous topics which occupy the attention of mankind. This portion of language is most used, and, therefore, most necessary; but its frequent use need not lessen the high estimate which we should set on Terminology, or the nomenclature adopted in the different sciences. Terminology has been the result of the advance of science from vagueness to accuracy, and from the poverty of its infancy, to the riches and abundance of its mature age.

It is the bond which gives scientific research its stability and consistency, and preserves in their proper places the various additions of successive ages.

With respect to Technical Language, we have considerable advantage over the ancients. Ours is more definite, as well as more extensive. The rapid progress of science is constantly enlarging the range of its vocabulary. To enter upon the investigations of science, or keep up with its improvements, we must know its terms; and since it has fortunately become fashionable to make its researches tributary to the comfort of common life, and the happiness of our race, Terminology should be as generally taught as Common Language. By this means, a key will be afforded to the youthful mind by which it can have access to the varied treasures of knowledge.

On the subject of Terminology our English dictionaries have been extremely defective. We shall in vain look even in Johnson's quarto work for some of the most common scientific terms. And in those that have been compiled since his time, with the exception of Webster's, there will not be found the terms used in the improved state of Chemistry, Mineralogy, and the other natural sciences; while obsolete words, that may not be met with more than once in a lifetime, are carefully given. Lexicographers object to the introduction of technical nomenclatures into their dictionaries, on account of their liability to be changed by new discoveries, theories, and systems. This may be a reason for excluding them for a time, sufficient to test their stability, but not for debarring them from the companionship of their associates, in a dictionary, when they have been daily in honourable use for half a century or even a century.

The English Language, like all other languages of civilized nations, is capable of being divided into Common and Technical, but with one striking peculiarity, which has an important bearing on its acquisition in a course of school instruction. In regard to the materials of which it is composed, it may be said to possess the most mixed character of any language in Europe. While the languages that are of Latin and Teutonic origin have their own scientific terminology, they retain also the advantage of having, to a very great extent, the etymological radicals of this terminology in use, in the familiar speech of the people, so that the phraseology of Literature and Science does not differ much from that of the community in general. This is very much the case with the French, Spanish, and Italian, but especially so with the German, which can boast that it is not under the necessity of borrowing a single term from the Latin or Greek. Such are its Etymological powers, that, however the field of science may enlarge, so as to make new words indispensable, it is able to meet every want from its own resources. The English, though its original and constructive basis is Saxon or German, has lost this power in the changes it has undergone, and from the circumstance of the English nation first learning the sciences through the medium of the Latin and Greek. Hence it exhibits in its words, the features of three distinct languages. The conversation of children and illiterate persons, is almost exclusively made up of words of Saxon origin. The language of literary persons, and of our authors in general literature, is composed of Saxon and Latin derivatives; the monosyllabic portion being from the former source, and the polysyllabic from the latter. While our men of science use a phraseology consisting of Saxon, Latin and Greek terms:

For the Saxon portion of our tongue we rarely find it necessary to apply to a dictionary, but for the words whose roots are to be found in the Latin and Greek, we must either have learned those languages, or be obliged constantly to refer to some expositor of their meaning. This has caused the publication of a great number of selections of words for the use of schools, some containing a very small part of the difficulties of our language, and others presenting a pretty full collection of them. In these works, however, the pupil does not see any systematic arrangement, such as will make him acquainted with the science of words. We mean to say, that there is no etymological system, and, as a consequence, the task of studying this knotty portion of our language becomes extremely irksome to those who are never conducted through a course of Latin and Greek. As the great majority of our youthful population are denied this advantage, a work that shall present these difficulties in an easy, scientific, and attractive form, has become truly a desideratum. This can be effected in no other way so well as by making Etymology the basis of the exposition of our polysyllabic terms. This has been done in the present work, by Mr. Oswald, in a manner which exhibits a synoptical view of the Latin and Greek derivatives in our language, more copious and better arranged than any thing of the kind that has yet been published.

Etymology is a most important branch of the science of Philology. It offers to our view a series of generalizations, which afford the means of obtaining a knowledge of a vast range of words with very little labor when compared with the process that is usually gone through. By prosecuting with perseverance, the judicious study of the relations of derivative words from their primitives, the pupil will acquire a philosophical acquaintance with our language. This can be rendered still more interesting by combining with it a course of exercises founded on the principles which we have endeavoured to establish in this introduction. These exercises we shall present in succession, and offer them as a practical mode of using this book. They will have reference to three divisions, which, in acquiring language, with correctness and facility, we consider as extremely useful. These are, Ideology, Etymology, and Phraseology.

The term Ideology, we use to express the connexion of ideas with words. As all our ideas of quality, action, and relation, are intimately associated with objects and scenes, it must follow that the words denoting objects are the principal words in a language. These we may call ideological radicals, and they should be the subjects of the analytical lessons we have alluded to. The terms that represent qualities, actions and relations, will form the subjects for generalization. Etymology is properly, only a branch of Ideology, but as it presents us with large families of words, retaining the orthographical features and meaning of their primitives, it becomes so valuable as to merit special attention. It has, hence, been made the guiding element in our course. By phraseology, we mean an analytical exhibition in words of some scene; and here it may be stated that we think in whole phrases as well as in single words, just as we think in whole scenes, as well as in individual pictures, or parts of a scene.

This is a fact so serviceable in its practical bearing on the learning of languages, that we may venture to say, that a language can never be speedily taught without making it a primary point in our exercises,

In order to bring into practice the principles we have laid down, it is indispensable that the pupil or class who are conducted through this book, should write phrases exemplifying the practical use of each word. When the prescribed lesson has been written and examined, an oral review of it ought to be made, in order to notice the different ideological relations of every word; as,—

1st. What sensible properties are or may be included in the meaning of the word under consideration; and by which of the senses do we become acquainted with its existence? If we take the word table, we find that it possesses visible and tactile properties; and we are made acquainted with its presence by our sight and our touch; and we may be also by our hearing. A flower may be known to us by sight, touch, smell, and taste; sugar by touch, taste, smell, sight, and even by hearing.—This is a fundamental exercise, and should never be omitted, as it strengthens the faculty of attention, and leads to many novel and striking observations and comparisons.

2dly. Does the word express an object, a quality, or an action? For instance, orange expresses an object, tepid, a quality, flow, an action.

3dly. Does it express an intellectual perception, or a moral feeling? e. g. Green represents an intellectual perception, good a moral feeling; so also amiable and hateful; while hara usually expresses an intellectual perception, but may likewise be used to indicate a moral feeling, as in the phrase, A hara man.

The same remark with regard to utility, is applicable to these two praxes as to the first.

4th. If the word is the name of an object, let the pupil give an ideological analysis by naming all its parts. Suppose flower is the word on which a phrase has been written; we find the parts to be the calyx or flower-cup, the corolla, the stamens, and the pistil. This exercise should be invariably prosecuted, since it becomes the most economical mode of acquiring the correct definition of terms. The most common object of nature or art, as pump, eye, shoe, by this mode of examination, will add to the store of useful terms. In the pump, we find the parts to be the stock, the bore, the handle or lever, the piston, the box, the valve, &c.; in the eye, the cornea, the iris, the pupil, the sclerotic coat, the lens, the vitreous and aqueous humours, &c.; and in the shoe, the vamp, the quarters, the sole, &c. Another very valuable result that must follow from this exercise, is that it will necessarily produce the habit of ready arrangement in composition. The ability to classify our ideas, and reduce them to a certain order, so as promptly to present a good outline of our views on any subject, is acknowledged by all to be a great acquirement. If, however, we direct the attention of the pupil to the uses of things, and of their parts, we shall extend still further the utility of this praxis. Thus the words leaf, liver, heart, lungs, would afford an opportunity for remarking, that the leaf performs the functions of a respiratory organ to the plant, as the lungs do to an animal; that the liver secretes bile, and that the heart is a muscular machine, which forces the blood by means of the arteries to all parts of the body. The pupil, by this means, will gain a great number of elementary truths in natural science, which will prepare him for farther advances.

5th. If the word is the name of a part of some object, a list of those objects which possess the part mentioned, should be made out. The same process of generalizing should be used with words expressing qualities and actions. This may also be done to advantage wherever a general term is brought forward; thus, when insect, bird, quadruped, are the subjects, the forming of a catalogue of each, will be a useful lesson in thinking.

6th. Classifying objects as natural or artificial, and as belonging to the animal, vegetable, or mineral kingdom, though simple enough in itself, has, nevertheless, a useful tendency.

7th. Another very valuable praxis is, to require the scholar to refer every word that is capable of it, to the science to which it may appertain, or in which we may find a description of it, either as an article or a process. Before, however, we state the mode of proceeding in this exercise, it may be proper to premise, that our language exhibits the singular anomaly of having common English or Saxon words for its nouns that are the names of familiar natural objects, while the adjectives that are used to distinguish the genus or species, are almost uniformly of Latin and Greek origin. This will be evident by the following promiscuous list, viz.

Nouns.	Adjectives.	Nouns.	Adjectives. eye.....	ocular, ophthalmic.	dog.....	canine.
lip.....	labial.	cat.....	feline.
nose.....	nasal.	goose.....	anserine.
tongue.....	lingual.	lungs.....	pulmonary.
tooth.....	dental.	bone.....	osseous.
sea.....	marine.	glass.....	vitreous.
river.....	fluvial.	joint.....	articular.
sun.....	solar.	lime.....	calcareous.
moon.....	lunar.	earth.....	terrestrial.
star.....	stellar, astral.	egg.....	oval, &c.

This list might be enlarged indefinitely, but these instances will suffice to show the extensive prevalence of the fact above noticed.—But as the common words which are of Saxon origin are not to be found in this dictionary, and will not of themselves become the subjects of the lessons suggested, we would recommend that either the Latin or Greek radicals that may be in the lessons should be classified by their sciences, or else the English noun to which the Latin adjectives relate. Thus, either canis, or dog, may be taken when we come to the word canine; so oculus, or eye, when ocular comes under review. The same remark will extend to all this class of designating adjectives; and by thus reverting to the Saxon-English name of the object, we carry our plan of scientific appropriation through the whole language. In this way the words horse, dog, cat, though not in this dictionary, as well as elephant and rhinoceros, which are, may be brought forward and assigned to that branch of Zoology denominated Mazology or Mammalia; eagle, crow, crane, wren, &c. to Ornithology; gnat, bee, wasp, larva, chrysalis, &c. to Entomology; tench, minnow, shark, mackerel, to Ichthyology; oyster, limpet, muscle, cyprea, &c. to Conchology; oak, poplar, rose, mushroom, &c. would be placed under Botany; flint, gypsum, quartz, talc, sapphires, diamond, under Mineralogy, as the science which exhibits their classification; and to

Chemistry, for an analysis of their properties. To the latter science we also transfer the terms oxygen, oxidizement, combustion, fermentation, &c. as constituting a part of its nomenclature. Mountain, river, rock, quarry, mine, pebble, &c. belong to Geology, which theorises on their formation, arrangement, &c. Bone, brain, heart, lungs, &c. will come under Anatomy for a description of them, and under Physiology for an account of their functions. By pursuing these hints, the various divisions of Physical, Mathematical, and Metaphysical science may have their subjects and their terms identified. We might perhaps as well add a few more instances; for the sake of those to whom this exercise is not familiar; thus, we refer

Fever, consumption, palsy, epilepsy, &c. to Medicine;

Fracture, phlegmon, abscess, gangrene, &c. to Surgery;

The medicinal properties of calomel, quinine, opium, &c. to Materia Medica;

Cloud, rain, hail, snow, &c. to Meteorology;

Line, angle, triangle, square, circle, &c. to Geometry;

Sine, tangent, secant, &c. to Trigonometry;

Sun, moon, star, eclipse, occultation, transit, &c. to Astronomy;

Lever, wheel, plane, screw, wedge, &c. to Mechanics;

Barometer, air-pump, vacuum, siphon, &c. to Pneumatics;

Light, vision, microscope, telescope, reflection, refraction, &c. to Optics;

To think, to judge, to reason, idea, memory, &c. to Intellectual Philosophy;

Proposition, syllogism, enthymeme, sophism, &c. to Logic;

Agriculture, commerce, manufactures, wages, pauperism, &c. to Political Economy;

Moral terms, to Ethics or Moral Philosophy.

One advantage accruing from this mode of parsing words into their sciences, will be, that the pupil will be able to tell in what science he may look for the investigation of any subject of inquiry. But this is not all; the plan admits of such an extension as to become an excellent means of ascertaining the generic and specific divisions of every branch of human knowledge. By making out lists under general and specific terms as recommended in a previous exercise, it cannot fall in accomplishing beneficial results.

It may be stated that the knowledge gained in this way would not be deep nor extensive. This is in some measure true, as it is not expected that our scholar should possess as profound views of a subject as the adept who has made it for years his study. But he will have the keys of knowledge; and will have fully come up to Locke's opinion of this matter, where he says "that youth should early be afforded a general view of all the divisions of human knowledge, as well that they may apply themselves to that which may hereafter suit their turn best, as that they may see the connexion and harmony of all the sciences." But no objection can exist on this score, when it is understood, that, in most cases, it is supposed that this course in the English shall be either accompanied or succeeded by the study of the Physical, Mathematical, and other sciences.

8th. Keeping up all the previous exercises, another may be added, which is, to notice the synonymous words of our language, and determine the various shades of difference in their meaning. Their use in affording variety of expression, and how the sentence must be changed in its arrangement in order to effect this, should also be attended to. Vagueness in the application of synonyms cannot be permitted, lest the very copiousness which they give to the language become a serious injury by exciting misunderstandings among those who use them incorrectly. Locke, in speaking of the necessity of understanding the full force of words, remarks that "the want of a precise signification in their words when men come to reason, especially on moral matters, is the cause of very obscure and uncertain notions. They use their undetermined words confidently, without much troubling their heads with a fixed meaning; whereby, besides the ease of it, they obtain this advantage, that as in such discourses they are seldom in the right, so they are as seldom to be convinced that they are in the wrong: it being just the same, to go about to draw these persons out of their mistakes, who have no settled notions, as to dispossess a vagrant of his habitation, who has no settled abode. The chief end of language being to be understood, words serve not for that end when they excite not, in the mind of the hearer, the same idea which they stand for in the mind of the speaker."

The examination of synonymous words affords a good opportunity for the exercise of discrimination and taste. The practice of separating from each word the ideas of which it is not properly the representative, as well as noticing which is the most perspicuous mode of expressing a sentiment, must tend to cultivate the taste and refine the style of the pupil. The etymological course contained in this dictionary presents the best elements for pursuing these investigations. For, however much words may in many instances vary from their radical meaning, and exhibit paronymous deviations from their etymon, still the etymology of words is, generally speaking, the true basis on which to settle their definitions. Hence, in all works on synonymy, the derivation is made the elementary part of the examination.

After observing the derivation of two or more words of similar meaning, the pupil may be led to perceive their difference, by noticing which is most general, and which most specific in its applications. In the words give, grant, bestow, it is easily seen that give has a more general meaning than grant; and grant a more general meaning than bestow. So, in way, road, route, course, the same differences in their general and specific application will readily decide the true sense which correct usage has attached to each word.

The mixed character of our language, before alluded to, is an abundant source of our synonymous words. Thus the Latin and the Saxon terms run a parallel course through the language, e. g.

Saxon.	Latin.	Saxon.	Latin.
happiness .....	felicity.	swiftness .....	velocity.
unhappy .....	miserable.	fleetness .....	celerity.
dreadful .....	terrible.	brink .....	margin.
footstep .....	vestige.	beseech .....	supplicate, &c.

These examples might be extended to hundreds; but those presented are sufficient to show how much the copiousness of the English is dependent on terms adopted from the Latin. We still see the same mode of ascertaining the shades of meaning applicable to these as to other synonymous words; that is, their more general or more specific acceptance.

Sometimes the true shades of difference in the meaning of synonymes may be ascertained by examining their opposites, or words of a contrary meaning. They may also in many cases be known by observing whether one word is not more usually applied to mental objects, while the other is used to designate those that are material.

By a constant reference to these few principles, the investigations connected with synonymous words will become both easy and interesting.

9th. We may now add another exercise to the foregoing; namely, the examination of equivocal and paronymous words. These constitute a large class, and assume a special importance in the study of language, from the circumstance that they give rise to many misunderstandings and disputes; and are a fruitful source of fallacies in our reasoning. This arises from the word having several meanings, if a primitive word; or from its deviating from the signification of its radical, if a derivative. To take as an instance of the former sort, the word "fit," we see that it means "proper, suitable, a paroxysm, to suit;" or mast of a ship, and mast, the fruit of oak or beech. As an instance exemplifying the latter, Dr. Whately, in his Logic, speaking of fallacies founded on Etymology, observes, "Perhaps no example of this can be found that is more extensively and mischievously employed than in the case of the word representative: assuming that its right meaning must correspond exactly with the strict and original sense of the word represent, the sophist persuades the multitude that a member of the House of Commons is bound to be guided in all points by the opinions of his constituents; and, in short, to be merely their spokesman: whereas law and custom, which, in this, may be considered as fixing the meaning of the term, require no such thing, but enjoin the representative to act according to the best of his own judgment, and on his own responsibility." It may be stated that ambiguity in an equivocal word can only obtain while it is used as the same part of speech, grammatically speaking; for so soon as the word assumes a meaning which constitutes it another part of speech, it is not difficult to determine its true signification. The reverse of this, however, takes place with most of those which may be classed as paronymous words.

By watching closely those paronymous deviations in derivative words, we shall give the science of Etymology its true value, and shield it from the ridicule by which it has sometimes been assailed by such men as Swift; whose wit and whose ignorance of philological laws, form the only palliation for their fooleries. At the same time we shall be preserved from the opposite error of Horne Tooke, Dr. Murray, Damm, &c. who, by attaching an inordinate and exclusive importance to researches into the origin of words, have exposed the subject to unmerited obloquy.

The etymological course contained in this work presents a grand synoptical view of the difficulties of our language. But although all the primary meanings are given from which most of the rest may readily be known, yet it is not intended to set aside the use of a common dictionary on the usual alphabetic arrangement. As a book of reference, it will be necessary to resort to another dictionary, more particularly in the case of these equivocal or paronymous terms.

10th. In the study of language, there are few exercises more interesting or useful than an attention to comparisons. and the figurative meanings of words; and the epithets that may be applied to nouns representing either material or immaterial objects. Thus the sun is compared to a king, life to a lamp, wisdom to light, hope to an anchor, &c. &c. Whenever words are presented in the lessons that represent or allude to natural objects, an opportunity is afforded for directing the mind of the pupil to figurative uses and comparisons. Epithets, as descriptive adjectives, will result from these comparisons. It forms an excellent lesson in thinking and in language for the pupil to apply all the epithets he can find, which can in any way describe or distinguish the word under consideration. Thus, to take the word lion as an example, he is figuratively called the king of beasts, the monarch of the forests, &c.; and the adjective epithets that describe him are tawny, yellow, roaring, raging, fierce, bold, courageous, noble, majestic, proud, stately, bounding, shaggy, long-maned, bloody, cruel, ravenous, &c. These instances may answer to exemplify our views on this point; their utility is so evident as to need no argument to enforce them.

11th. Another attempt at awakening interest might be made by endeavouring to ascertain what is tacitly implied in any word as some way connected or co-existent with it; e. g. the word thunder necessarily associates with its meaning the additional ideas of lightning, clouds, and warm weather.—In the word pump, we find that the probable associations are, that it is in a well, and near a house: but neither of these may be true, and the degree of truth must be measured by what is the most usual condition of things. Our ideas of association thus divide themselves into necessary and contingent. When we mention the word roof, the imagination immediately sets a building under it, yet the term may be applied to the same object entirely separated from any building. Still, where there is no direct proof to the contrary, the mind rests satisfied with the highest probability, resulting from the most common connexion of things. So, to see, to hear, to eat, &c. necessarily imply some being that sees, hears, eats, and something seen, heard, or eaten, as well as a time and place where these actions were performed. A number of contingent associations arise with these words, which it is also well to bring under review as possibilities.

To some persons these exercises may appear trivial; but they certainly cannot know how much the imagination is strengthened by them, at the same time that it is brought under the control of the judgment. This mental process is in fact the course of investigation pursued in all those cases where we cannot arrive at mathematical certainty, and forms by far the greatest portion of our exercises in reasoning. We read, for instance, that Noah built an ark of gopher-wood, of great dimensions; our imagination, guided by judgment, may draw a great many curious and highly probable inferences respecting the state of the arts among the antediluvians. Metallic tools were necessary for the construction of such a building, and the knowledge of various chemical processes is presupposed in order to bring any of the metals into a state in which they may be used as instruments.

In reference to the reasonings of common life, this praxis is of such value as not to yield in utility to mathematical researches; and though it does not arrive at the same certainty, yet it gives equal exercise to the powers of memory, judgment, and reasoning, with the most accurate course of geometrical or algebraical analysis.

12th. Our last exercise in this series will be, to embody as much as possible all the preceding ones in a practical effort at forming scenery, by all the natural associations of which the subject is capable. Here the imagination may have full scope, and vary her scenes by every appropriate change. E. g. take the word arbour: here its location would immediately be determined to be a garden; let its relations to surrounding objects be realized, and also its relations to more distant objects: place it in imagination on a southern slope of ground, overlooking a river; let the time be the month of June, let the weather be pleasant, the plants and trees flourishing, the birds singing, with all the circumstances of rural scenery that may give interest. Then notice its occupants, and the moral feelings and contemplations awakened by the scene. When this is realized and described, change the season and the place, and so proceed until a sufficient exercise is given to the mind for one subject.

In this way the imagination may be cultivated to an extent commensurate with the natural strength of that faculty. Composition would become an easy and a simple process, and the capability of making the written phrases on succeeding lessons would be constantly increasing. To make good phrases on an individual word is not an easy matter; but its importance is so great, that the mode of using this dictionary rests for its greatest utility on the persevering adherence to this part of the plan. Etymology is very valuable, ideological analysis and intellectual combination extremely useful; but it is only Phraseology and written composition that give our knowledge a living and an active form. We have so much passive education at present, that it is to be feared that the course which has been prescribed may not be followed out as extensively as it should be; but if teachers will only see the subject in its true bearing, they will not think that too much stress has been laid upon its constant practice. The habits of ready composition possessed by the pupils of the deaf and dumb institutions, will convince any one who is sceptical of the efficiency of this course. Their intellectual education is founded very much on the principles and practice which we have developed and endeavoured to bring into active existence among those who have the use of all their senses. And if they, deprived of one of the most ready inlets of instruction, learn so much and so well, by this means, what may not those do, who shall use the same method, without these obstacles and disadvantages? The facility with which they bring all their learning into a practical condition on the spur of the moment, has been a frequent theme of remark and wonder; and the great usefulness of this ability is manifest to the illiterate as well as the learned. Dugald Stewart remarks, that "when theoretical knowledge and practical skill are happily combined in the same person, the intellectual power of man appears in its full perfection, and fits him equally to conduct with a masterly hand the details of ordinary business, and the untried difficulties of new and hazardous situations." This view is applicable to every branch of human knowledge where abstract principles can have a practical exhibition.

This work will be especially useful to those pupils in our male and female seminaries who do not learn Latin and Greek; as they will, by its aid, be able to acquire, in a simple and philosophical manner, all the difficult terms of the English language, including most of the terminology of science. They will thus be prepared to enter on a course of scientific or literary studies with much greater advantages than they would otherwise possess. But it is not only to the mere English scholar that this book may be useful; it will also offer great facilities to those who are going through a course of Latin and Greek, by showing them the practical bearing of their studies on our language: and as this is a subject that is not enough attended to in our schools, it is believed that half an hour or more each day could not be more profitably employed than by consecutive lessons on the plan we have recommended. The great English philologist, Dr. J. Jones, observes, in his Analogiæ Latinæ, "If the custom prevailed in all the schools, (which assuredly ought to be the case,) of tracing the English to the Latin language, the utility of this last would be more generally and permanently felt; nor would it be so readily forgotten in manhood, after the long and fruitless pains that have been taken to acquire it in youth." This book presents the means of tracing these connexions to a greater extent than any work in our language. From the synoptical tables which it contains of the Greek and Latin derivatives, it will also become a useful family book of reference, for those who have long since finished their lessons in "hic, hæc, hæc," and "ὅ, ἡ, το;" but are still disposed to revive in their minds some of the relations that connect our language of science and literature to those of Greece and Rome.

With regard to a series of lessons in compositions, they may be very usefully pursued, combined with these dictionary exercises. They may be divided into two kinds: 1st. The writing out from memory, after a single reading, all that can be remembered of any subject upon which the pupil has read. This will cultivate ready memory, increase the stock of words, and improve the style. The second is, to write an original composition on some specific theme. Neither of these will be difficult exercises if our whole plan is carried out, as matter and manner will both be familiar. We therefore deem it unnecessary to add any thing further by way of directing the mode; but cannot leave it without pressing the paramount importance of frequent, yea, daily, set compositions on some easy subject, whether it be the description of some country, animal, plant, mineral, habit, virtue, or vice. Pope says, "True ease in writing comes from art, not chance:" this is strictly true, particularly when we unite with it the principle of Horace, "Scribendi, rectè sapere est principium et fons." While Pope's "art" or practice and Horace's "rectè sapere" are faithfully combined, as we believe they are, in the plan of using this dictionary, a judicious teacher cannot fail to teach his pupils the art of composition.

There is only one objection which we anticipate against the use of this book for phrase-making; viz. that it does not give the definitions of the derivative words, except in a few instances of peculiar meanings, or for the exemplification of the primitive word, and leaves the signification to be discovered by the scholar, who is furnished with all the elements which form the term. This, so far from being an objection, presents an advantage of great value. It offers an opportunity for more of that exertion of mind which constitutes act- ive education, than could possibly be effected by giving the definition; just as it is better to require a pupil to give the boundaries of a country from a map, than to learn and merely recite them by rote from a book. The latter is a passive business, while the former is active. By the one, he gains ideas; by the other, words only. Where, however, words occur whose correct signification cannot be made out by their etymology, he should apply to the common dictionaries, such as Webster's, &c. for them: but this should be done only after he has made a proper use of his etymological means.

In conclusion, we hope that our endeavours to render an excellent book more practically useful may be candidly examined, and thoroughly tested by experiment; upon the result of which we are willing to rest whatever claims our opinions may have to the adoption of the public.

NOTE.—The reader unacquainted with Latin and Greek will please to observe that a and e, of the primitives, are frequently changed into i in the derivatives and compounds. In verbs, also, the root often appears under two forms. The two forms in the Latin verb from which our words are derived, are the present tense of the indicative mood, and a form called the supine. The present indicative, therefore, and the supine are usually given, which are sufficient as a guide in nearly every case.

ETYMOLOGICAL DICTIONARY.

PART I.

PREFIXES OF THE ENGLISH LANGUAGE.*

1. OF ENGLISH OR SAXON ORIGIN.

A, † signifies, on, in, to, or at: as, afoot', on foot; abed', in bed; afield', to the field; afar, at a great distance.

BE, ‡ signifies over; to cover with; as, bedaub', to daub over; besprin'kle, to sprinkle over; bedew', to cover

* It is understood that the Prefixes and Affixes, with a few Examples, shall be committed to memory.

† It appears proper, in the outset, to mention that some of the Prefixes and Affixes in certain words, seem redundant, or at least retain very little of their general signification. [This is more especially true with regard to the Saxon prefix Be, and the Latin Con. To these remarks we may add, that in a number of instances, in which the prefix seems materially to modify the root to which it is joined, its etymological signification is so irregular or obscure, as to render the attempt to give a satisfactory explanation unprofitable, if not altogether impracticable. Thus: "embowel" signifies not to "put bowels into," as its etymology might lead us to suppose, but to "take out the bowels or entrails."]

‡ Be, in because, before, besiege, &c., is the same word as by. It denotes near, close, about, on, at, from some root signifying to pass or to press. [It is not to be wondered at, that the prevailing signification or power of a prefix so irregular in its meaning, should have been mistaken by many etymologists; more especially as in the English language it occurs comparatively seldom. That the significations here given, ("over," to "cover with," &c.) are the prevailing ones, may be seen by referring to words containing this particle, in German, from which language (or from the Saxon, an old form or dialect of the German) it has been introduced into English. The following examples may serve to illustrate and prove our position: Bekreiden, to chalk over; Befrieren, to freeze over; Beineistern, to overmaster; Beersten, to rust over; Besalben, to smear over or besmear, to cover with with dew; bemire', to cover with mire: sometimes it is intensive, that is, it increases the force of the word to which it is prefixed, in which cases it is equivalent to thoroughly or completely: as bedrench, to drench thoroughly or completely.

EM, for EN, having the same signification as the preceding, is prefixed to words beginning with b, m, or p: as, embot'tle, to put into a bottle; embark', to put into a salve or ointment; Beschatten, to overshadow; Beshiffen, to sail over; Beschlabbern, to slobber over; Besohneien, to snow over or upon, to cover with snow; Beschlämmen, to bemire; Beschmutzen, to daub over, or besoul; Bespiessen, to shingle over; Bespreiten, to spread over; Besprengen, to sprinkle over; Besprudeln, to sputter over; Bespühlen, to ripple or wash over; Beströmen, to stream or flow over; Bebändern, to decorate or cover with ribbons; Bebäumen, to cover with trees; Beblättern, to cover with leaves; Beblümen, to cover or embellish with flowers; Bedornen, to cover with thorns; Beeisen, to cover with ice; Befiedern, to cover with, or furnish with feathers; Beflittern, to cover with spangles; Beharzen, to cover with resin; Beküssen, to cover with kisses; Belauben, to cover with leaves; Bemodern, to cover with mold; Bemoosen, to cover with moss. A multitude of other examples might be added to this list. In the following German verbs, Be is intensive; Bearbeiten, to elaborate, also to belabor; Bedenken, to think well or carefully, to bethink, to reflect; Beklopfen, to beat much, or repeatedly; Bekräftigen, to strengthen, to corroborate, to confirm; Belasten, to burden or load too much, to overburden, &c. &c.—J. T.] * En coincides with Fr. en, Lat. in, and Gr. εν, and some English words are written indifferently with en or in. When the word is borrowed from the French, en is more proper than in.

bark or vessel; emmew', to cage in, or put into a cage; empow'er, to put into power; to give power to.

UNDER, signifies beneath; less than another; less than is proper or just: as, undersheriff, one who is beneath or under the sheriff; underbid, to bid less than another; under-officer, an officer less than (or inferior to) another; undervalue, to value less than is proper or just.

underbid' , v.	undermine' , v.	underrate' , v.
un'derling , n.	un'derplot , n.	undertake' , v.

WITH, signifies from; against: as, withdraw', to draw from or away, to retire; withhold', to hold from; withstand, to stand against.

2. OF LATIN ORIGIN.

A, signifies from; off; away: as, avert', to turn away; to turn from; avul'sion, a tearing off or away.

AB, another form of the preceding, has the same signification: as, abduct', to take or carry off; aberra'tion, a wandering away.

ABS, for A or AB, has the same signification: as, abs'ent, being away; abstain', to hold from, to refrain.

AD, signifies to; by or near; on or upon; and more rarely, up; against; for; at: as adapt', to fit to; adja'cent, lying by or near; advert', to turn to, to refer to, to notice.

A, for AD, signification the same: as, ascribe', for adscribe, to write to or against,* to attribute; asperse', to sprinkle upon; hence, to stain or slander.

AC,† for AD, signification the same; as, accede', for adcede, to yield to; access', for adcess, a going to, approach.

* That is, to write any work or act to or against one's name, as in an account-book; hence, to "charge to," to "impute" or "attribute."

† It will be perceived that ad and several other prefixes change the final consonant so that it may correspond to the initial letter of the root to which it is joined. Thus, it becomes ac before a root beginning with c; af, before one beginning with f, and so on. In like manner, con becomes col before a root commencing with l; cor, before one beginning with r, &c. To this general rule, however, there are a number of exceptions.

AF, for AD, signifies the same : as, afflux', for adflux, a flowing to ; affu'sion, for adfusion, a pouring upon.

affin'ity, n.

affla'tus, n.

AG, for AD, signifies the same : as, agglu'tinate, for adglutinate, to glue to, to cause to adhere ; aggress', for adgress, to go to or against.

AL, for AD, signification the same : as, allis'ion, for adlision, a dashing or striking upon or against ; al-locu'tion, for adlocution, a speaking to, or address.

AN, for AD, signifies the same : as, annex', for adnex, to tie to ; to join ; announce', for adnounce, to tell to.

AP, for AD, signifies the same : as, append', for adpend, to hang or join to, to affix.

AR, for AD, signifies the same : as, ar'rogate, for adrogate, to ask or claim for (one's self) ; arro'sion, for adrosion, a nibbling at, or gnawing.

AS, for AD, signifies the same : as, assimilate', for adsimilate, to make like to ; assist', for adsist, to stand by, to help.

AT, for AD, signification the same : as, attest', for adtest, to bear witness to ; attract', for adtract, to draw to.

attest', v.

attriti'on, n.

AM, or AMB, (Gr. αμφι,) signifies round or about: as, am'bient, going round or surrounding; am'putate, to cut round or prune, to cut off.

ambiti'on, n.	anhela'tion, n.	ambus'tion, n.
ambigu'ity, n.	am'putate, v.	circumam'bient, a.

ANTE, signifies before: as, antece'dent, going before.

an'techamber, n.	antedilu'vian, n. &amp; a.	antemun'dane, a.
antedate', v.	antemerid'ian, a.	anteperult', n.

CIRCUM, signifies round or about: as, circumnav'igate, to sail round; circumvolu'tion, a rolling or turning round.

cir'cuit, n. &amp; v.	circumfuse', v.	circumscribe', v.
circumam'bient, a.	circumja'cent, a.	cir'cumspect, a.
circum'ference, n.	circumnav'igate, v.	cir'cumstance, n. &amp; v.

CIS, signifies on this side of: as, cis'alpine, on this side of the Alps; * cisatlan'tic, on this side of the Atlantic.

CON, for CUM, signifies together; with; altogether or entirely; the same with another†: as con'catenate, to link together; con'fluent, flowing or running together; con'gregate, to flock together; connect', to tie or join together; convene', to come together; convoke', to call together.

* Cisalpine and Transalpine are generally used with reference to Rome. Hence, Cisalpine signifies south of the Alps, i. e. between the Alps and Rome; Transalpine denotes the contrary side.

† Con is sometimes simply intensive, and sometimes almost or quite redundant. Cogo, (from con and ago,) besides to "drive or bring together," often signifies to "force or compel," whence our word cogent, "compelling, forcible." In like manner, compello (from con and pello) appears in many cases to lose the peculiar force of the prefix, and to signify simply to "drive or force," which corresponds to our "compel." Conduco frequently signifies little more than duco, to "lead or conduct." The departure from the original meaning in these and similar instances, may perhaps be explained, if we consider that in words relating to the driving of flocks or herds, or the leading of armies, (which occupations, at least in the early periods of Roman history, must have furnished the most frequent occasions for the use of such verbs as compello, conduco, &c.,) the prefix con, "together," or "all together," is not without its appropriate force. It would be perfectly easy and natural afterwards, to employ a word, which in strictness could only be used in reference to numbers, in describing actions which refer to an individual object. See note on page 28.

ANT, ENT*, signifies one who or the person that: as, as-

* The suffix Ant or Ent, both in nouns and adjectives, is derived from the termination of the present active participle in Latin. Hence, assistant literally signifies a person assisting; assailant, a person assailing; pendant, a hanging ornament, &c. Those acquainted with Latin will perceive that English words of this class, derived from Latin verbs of the first conjugation, having the present participle in ans, will terminate in ant; while those derived from the other three conjugations, which form the present participle in ens, will for the most part have ent for their terminal syllable. The following nouns and adjectives of this class, although derived from Latin verbs

sis'tant, one who stands by or assists; claima'nt, one who calls for or claims; ser'vant, one who serves; a'gent, one who acts (for another); pa'tient, one who suffers; pen'itent, one who repents; stu'dent, one who studies.

ER, and, rarely, AR (in nouns which are for the most part formed from verbs), signify one who, and denote usually the actor or doer: as, aid'er, one who aids; beg'gar, one who begs; build'er, one who builds;

* The suffix ee is derived from the termination of the passive participle in French. Thus, DONN-er signifies to PRESENT: DONN-ée, PRESENT-ed, also a person PRESENTED with any thing, or to whom any thing is presented.

† This suffix, which is from the French, usually denotes one's employment or occupation. Eer and Ier have precisely the same force, the former being merely an Anglicized form of the latter. The French termination -ier, sometimes signifies one who, or that which has or bears: as, CHANDELier, that which has or bears CANDLES (Fr. CHANDELLES); POMmier, that which has or bears APPLES (POMMES); FRUITier, sometimes applied to a tree that bears FRUIT, also denotes one who has or keeps FRUIT for sale.

teach'er, one who teaches; treas'urer, one who keeps treasure; vil'lager, one who lives in a village.

arch'er, n.	biog'rapher, n.	convey'ancer, n.
artif'icer, n.	but'ler, n.	cot'tager, n.
ba'ker, n.	car'rier, n.	geog'rapher, n.

STER, signifies one that : as, song'ster, one that sings songs ; spin'ster, one that spins ; team'ster, one who drives a team.

ACY, signifies Ness, i. e. state, quality or attribute of being ; office : as, ac'curacy, *the quality or attribute of being accurate, accurateness ; cel'ibacy, the state of being unmarried ; cu'racy, the office of a curate ;
magi'stracy, the office of a magistrate.*

of carrying, allowance for carrying, also the thing or vehicle in which any thing is carried ; mar'riage, the act of marrying, the state of being married ; or'phan-age, the state of being an orphan ; peer'age, the condition or rank of a peer, the peers (of any country) taken collectively ; bag'gage, a collection of bags or bundles ; herb'age, a collection of herbs, herbs in general ; mint'age, an allowance for minting or coining.*

* The prefix Age is probably derived from the Latin verb ago, to "do or act," and hence the primary signification is an "acting or act of."

† Instead of "collection of," it would be better in some instances to say "taken or considered collectively." Thus, "Herbage" may be defined as "herbs taken collectively," &c.

advan'tage, n.	coin'age, n.	non'age, n.
ap'panage, n.	do'tage, n.	par'entage, n.

CLE, CULE, ULE, signifies little; minute: as, animal'-

* The terminations Ance and Ancy, Ence and Ency, are more directly formed from the Latin -antia and -entia: e. g. consonance is from consonantia; constancy, from constantia; vigilance, from vigilantia; impudence, from impudentia; innocence, from innocentia, &c. As, however, there are a multitude of English nouns in Ance, Ence, &c., which have no corresponding Latin words in -antia or -entia, it is perhaps preferable to refer them generally to the present active participle in -ans or -ens, from which both the Latin and English nouns of this class are ultimately derived: Accordingly "abundance" may be defined as the "state or circumstance of being abundant;" "vigilance" "the state or quality of being vigilant," &c. See Note on page 37. A number of words of this class are written either with -nce and -ncy: as, arrogance or arrogancy; fragrance or fragrancy: innocence or innocency, &c.

† Ary, in the words breviary, commentary, diary, dictionary, denotes a book: as, diary, a book where (or in which) a daily account is kept.

* Con, in this word, seems to denote "altogether" or "entirely." Hence convalescence would imply a restoring of the healthful condition to every part of the body, and not to one organ or function only.

† The termination ice (Latin, -itia) does not essentially differ in signification from Ance or Ence when denoting a "state or quality." The simple point of distinction between them is that the latter is derived from a Latin participle present, or adjective ending in -ens, the former usually from an adjective in -us.

‡ Academician, a "member of an academy," particularly a "member of the French Academy," appears to be the only exception among the words of this class.

ICS or IC, signifies the science or art of: as, econom'ics or oeconomics, the science of household affairs; op'tics, the science of vision and of light; tac'tics, the science or art of military arrangement.

com'etary, a.	mil'itary, a.	ro'tary, a.

ATE, signifies having; -ed or -d §: as, for'tunate,

* It will be perceived that adjectives of this class are usually formed from diminutives. Thus, aciculus, a "little needle," is the diminutive of Acus; annulus, a "little circle," a "ring," is the diminutive of Annus, a "circle," a "year," and so on. This circumstance does not seem generally to modify the signification of the adjectives so derived, euphony being apparently the only motive for forming them from the diminutive rather than from the primitive word.

† An "honorary title" is one given merely for the honor of the thing; in other words, merely for the purpose of conferring honor.

‡ Thus, an "epistolary correspondence" is a correspondence by letters.

§ Suffix in ate is usually derived from atus, the termination of the passive participle in Latin. Thus, CORPOR-O signifies I FORM INTO A BODY; CORPOR-atus, FORM-ed INTO A BODY.

having fortune; cor'porate, formed into a body, united in a body; confed'erate, leagued together, united in a league.

ac'urate, a.	illit'erate, a.	intem'perate, a.

EUS, signifies consisting of; like; pertaining to; -y: as, a'queous, consisting of water, like water, watery; ig'neous, pertaining to fire, consisting of fire, like fire, fiery.

* It may be observed that whenever a word not directly derived from the Latin takes the suffix in ble, this syllable is invariably preceded by a; as attain-able, answer-able, blam-able, love-able, punish-able, read-able, redeem-able. Among the examples here cited, attainable and punishable, though evidently derived from Latin roots, are so much corrupted or changed as to be excluded from the class of words of pure Latin derivation.

On the other hand, words in ble, formed from the Latin, without any other change than dropping a syllable at the end; as audible (Lat. audibilis); disputable (Lat. disputabilis); estimable (Lat. estimabilis); flexible (Lat. flexibilis); laudable (Lat. laudabilis); legible (Lat. legibilis), have the penultimate syllable like the Latin; in other words, derivatives of this class formed from Latin verbs of the 1st conjugation, have able; those formed from the other conjugations have ible, with the exception of deleble (Lat. delebilis, from Deleo of the 2d conjugation) and noble (Lat. nobilis, from Nosco, of the 3d conjugation), probably a contraction from noscibilis; which would be the regular derivative from Nosco.

ESCENT, signifies growing or becoming; somewhat; -ish: as, albes'cent, growing white, whitish; putres'cent, becoming rotten; rubes'cent, growing red, somewhat red, reddish.

* Atlas was a king of Mauritania in Africa, who, when Perseus showed him Medusa's head, was instantly changed into a large mountain, from which the contiguous ocean was named Atlantic. The fable, that Atlas supported the heavens on his back, arose from his fondness for astronomy, and his often frequenting elevated places and mountains, whence he might observe the heavenly bodies. A collection of maps is called Atlas, probably from a picture of him in this attitude, prefixed to some collection.

† These words, atone, atonement, in the Scriptural sense, always convey the idea of a sacrifice. (See Exod. xxix. 36. Lev. xvii. 11. Job xxxiii. 24.)

* This word is derived by some from χυμος, juice, or χύω, to melt; by others, from an oriental word, ΚΕΜΑ, black. According to the supposed etymology, it is written y or e. Some deduce it from the name of a person eminently skilled in the science; whose name, however, is written both χύμης and χίμης. Others consider Chemi, the Coptic name of Egypt, which was the cradle of this science, as the original.—V. Morin. Dict. Etm. Fr. et Gr. "It is derived originally from chemia, and that word from Cham.—The Egyptians were deeply skilled in astronomy and geometry; also in chymistry and physic." Bryant—Johnson's Dict. by Todd.

Chymistry is an art whereby sensible bodies contained in vessels, or capable of being contained therein, are so changed, by means of certain instruments and principally fire, that their several powers and virtues are thereby discovered, with a view to philosophy or medicine.—Boerhaave.

Most of the substances belonging to our globe are constantly undergoing alterations in sensible qualities; and one variety of matter becomes, as it were, transmitted into another. The object of chemical philosophy is to ascertain the causes of all such phenomena, whether natural or artificial, and to discover the laws by which they are governed.—Sir H. Davy.

* So styled, either from the circumstance, that the tribe of Levi or the priest-hood, is, in the Old Testament, called 'the inheritance' of the Lord; and reciprocally God is called their 'inheritance,' Joshua viii. 33. Ezek. xlv. 28.—that tribe being entirely consecrated to the service of God; or from the practice of heathen priests, who used to draw lots, either to ascertain the will of the Deity, or prognosticate future events. Formerly clerk was the usual term for a scholar; most situations of trust or talent being filled by the clergy.

* A deist is one who follows no particular religion, but only acknowledges the existence of God, without any other article of faith or revealed religion.

But "the word deist or theist, in its original signification, implies merely the belief of God, being opposed to atheist; and so there may be deists of various kinds, according to their respective religions which they receive, over and above that prime article. But those that reject all traditional religions, and yet profess to believe in God, are merely deists, or emphatically such."—Waterland. Christ. Vind

‡ "Category (in Logic), a name for the predicates or attributes contained under any genus, of which Aristotle reckons ten, viz. substance, quantity, quality, relation, acting, suffering, time, place, situation, and habit."—Crabb's Dictionary.

§ That property of bodies of restoring themselves to their former figure, after any external pressure,—as in Indian-rubber.

|| "When certain bodies are rubbed against each other, for instance, amber or glass upon woollen cloth, small sparks dart from them, and they acquire the property of drawing light objects towards them, which are almost instantly expelled. All bodies do not possess this property (in the same degree). If, instead of amber or glass, a metal be employed, little or no effect is produced. The substance first discovered to draw light objects to itself is amber, the ηλεκτρον, electron of the Greeks, and hence the origin of the word electricity. Many others have since been found to possess the same quality, as glass, jet, sulphur, wax, resin, silk, fur, and worsted. These are called electrics, because, when rubbed, they excite electricity. Those, on the contrary, which have not this property, that is, those which do not attract light objects when rubbed, are called non-electric; they are metals, water, and a number of salts and earths. The most remarkable property of electrified bodies, is their first attracting, and then repelling light objects."—Fyfe's Chemistry.

EO, v. irreg. to go. IT-US, p. p. gone: as, ambiti'on,* a going round; ex'it, gone out; sediti'on, a going aside, * Those who sought honours or preferment, among the Romans, endeavoured to gain the favour of the people by every popular art, viz. by going round their houses, (ambiendo, ab am et eo), by shaking hands, by addressing and naming them, &c.; hence ambitio, ambition. From the external object, ambition came to be applied to the mind; signifying the desire of honour or preferment, or something higher than what is at present possessed. The b in ambition, and d in sedition, are euphonic letters.

* "The equator on the earth, or equinoctial in the heavens, is a great circle, whose poles are the poles of the world. It divides the globe into two equal parts, the northern and southern hemispheres. It passes through the east and west points of the horizon; and at the meridian, is raised as much above the horizon, as is the complement of the latitude of the place. Whenever the sun comes to this circle, it makes equal days and nights all round the globe, because he then rises due east, and sets due west, which he doth at no other time of the year."—Harris.

† "Equinoxes are the precise times in which the sun enters into the first point of Aries and Libra; for then, moving exactly under the equinoctial (line), he makes our days and nights equal. This he doth twice a-year, about the 21st of March and 23d of September, which therefore are called the vernal and autumnal equinoxes."—Harris.

FAUN-US,† m. 2. a rural deity—faun,† n. faun'ist, n.

* Fate, literally, the word or decree spoken by God; a fixed sentence by which the Deity has unalterably and irrevocably determined the order of events; a series of causes; the course of nature. Fates or Destinies of the ancients, the three fatal sisters, Clotho, Lachesis, Atropos, were infernal deities, supposed to determine the life of men by spinning: Clotho held the distaff, Lachesis spun, and Atropos cut the thread.

† Servius says, Faunus, the son of Picus, was the first who built a temple in Italy; hence called Faunus. Fauns, rural deities, having horns on their heads with pointed ears and tails.

* "Fermentation, a slow motion of the intestine particles of a mixt body, arising usually from the operation of some active acid matter, which rarifies, exalts, and subtilizes the soft and sulphureous particles: as when leaven or yeast rarifies, lightens, and ferments bread or worst. And this motion differs much from that usually called ebullition or effervescence, which is a violent boiling and struggling between an acid and an alkali, when mixed together."—Harris,

* Galaxy, the milky way, or via lactea, is a broad white path or track, encompassing the whole heavens, and extending itself in some places with a double path, but for the most part with a single one. It has been discovered to consist of an innumerable quantity of fixed stars, different in situation and magnitude; from the confused mixture of whose light its whole colour is supposed to be occasioned. Hence any splendid assemblage of persons or things.—Agalaxy, without, or want of milk.

† "The wife of Galvani, professor of anatomy at Bologna, accidentally discovered, that when the nerve of the limb of a frog, lying near an electrical machine, was touched with a piece of metal, it was thrown into violent convulsions, even though it had been dead for some time.—Galvani repeated the experiment, and, after varying it in different ways, proved satisfactorily what had thus been discovered by mere accident. He found that the convulsions could also be excited independently of the electric machine (by means of metals.) It has therefore been called Galvanism, from its discoverer, and sometimes also voltic electricity, (from Volta, who supposed that it was merely common electricity evolved by the metals, particularly zinc and silver, the animal being the conductor, and showing its effects); and the apparatus (being plates of zinc and silver, arranged in pairs alternately, and a moist cord being put between each pair) by which this was proved, is now termed a voltic pile.—Sir H. Davy found, on using the very powerful battery of the Royal Institution, consisting of 2000 pair of plates, each nearly six inches square, that when the pieces of charcoal were kept at the distance of four inches, there was a brilliant arch of light, and the greater part of them was constantly in a state of ignition. By Galvanism, there is not only the evolution of light, but what is still more remarkable, metals are easily ignited, and even fused, so that an intense heat is also excited.—It has been already stated, that it is generally admitted that Galvanism and electricity are one and the same agent; and that they are so, is evident from their effects. They both cause contraction of the animal fibre. In passing from one object to another, both emit light and heat. Conductors of electricity are conductors of Galvanism; while those which are

"Although Galvanism and electricity may be considered as the same principles, still, according to the present state of our knowledge, they may be thus distinguished. Galvanism is the portion of electricity which forms the component part of the conducting body, in the act of undergoing a change in its capacity, from a greater to a lesser state; while electricity is the result of a temporary change in non-conducting bodies, inso-much that their capacities become, by attrition, momentarily increased." — Wilkinson's Elem. of Galvanism.

† "Gazetta (à Gaza, a treasure, wealth, Pers.) is a Venetian halfpenny, the price of a newspaper, of which the first was published at Venice.—Dr. Johnson. It was a kind of literary newspaper, in single sheets, published at Venice in the sixteenth century, which was sold for a gazet. The foglio d'avvisi, from the circumstance of its price, has given the name of gazette to newspapers in many countries. At first, we used, in the plural, gazetti. ‡ Geometry, originally, signifies the art of measuring the earth, or any distances or dimensions on or within it; but it is now used for the science of quantity, extension, or magnitude, abstractly considered, without any regard to matter. Geometry is usually divided into the speculative and practical; the former of which contemplates and treats of the properties of continued quantity abstractedly; and the latter applies these speculations and theorems to use and practice."—Harris.

* Hydrogen, literally, a generator of water; chemically, a gas, combined with oxygen, producing water; then called inflammable air, and forms the gas-lights. Nitrogen, a generator of nitre in its gaseous state; and constitutes four-fifths of atmospheric air. It extinguishes flame and animal life. Oxygen, a generator of acids. It is essential to life and combustion, constituting one-fifth of atmospheric air, and exists in most vegetable and animal products, acids, salts, and oxides. Oxygen and Nitrogen are gases transparent and colourless, and hence invisible, having neither taste nor smell.

* (Travimeter, an instrument for measuring the specific gravities of bodies.

† Gravitation, the act of tending to the centre ; the pressure that a body, by the force of its gravity, exerts on another body under it. It is that species of attraction which operates among bodies though placed at a remote distance, with a force proportioned to the quantity of matter contained in those bodies ; such as the falling of a stone to the ground. It is different from Cohesion,—a species of attraction which operates among the small particles of the same bodies when brought into close proximity to each other, causing them to unite, and when united, retaining them in that state. The particles of a slate are kept together by means of this property. And it is different from Chemical attraction, which is that force by which the particles of different bodies are intimately united, so as to form a new substance.

‡ "Gravity, that quality by which all heavy bodies tend towards the centre, accelerating their motion the nearer they approach towards it, true philosophy has shown to be unsolvable by any hypothesis, and resolved it into the immediate will of the Creator."—Quincy.

† Hercules, a celebrated hero of antiquity, the son of Jupiter and Alcmena, who travelled as far as the Straits of Gibraltar, and is said to have erected two pillars, one at Cadiz in Spain, and the other opposite at Centa in Africa. Hercules, by the will of Jupiter, was subjected to the power of Eurystheus, king of Argos and Mycenæ, son of Sthenelus and Nicippe. He, apprehensive of Hercules' power and strength, commanded him to achieve a number of enterprises, the most difficult and arduous ever known, generally called the twelve labours of Hercules. For undertaking these, he received a coat of arms and helmet from Minerva; a sword from Mercury; a horse from Neptune; a shield from Jupiter; a bow and arrows from Apollo; and from Vulcan, a golden cuirass and brazen buskin, with a celebrated club of brass. The first labour imposed by Eurystheus upon Hercules, being yet in the 16th year of his age, was, to kill the lion of Nemea, which ravaged the country near Mycenæ. 2. To destroy the Lernean Hydra, which had 7 heads according to Apollodorus, 50 according to Simonides, and 100 according to Diodorus. When one head was destroyed, two others immediately sprang up; but his friend Iolas, by his command, burned the root of it with a hot iron; which succeeded, and he became victorious. 3. To bring alive and unhurt into the presence of Eurystheus a stag famous for its incredible swiftness, its golden horns, and brazen feet. 4. To bring alive a wild boar, which ravaged the neighbourhood of Erymanthus. In this expedition he destroyed the Centaur, and caught the boar, at whose sight Eurystheus was so frightened, that he hid himself for some days in his brazen vessel. 5. To clean the stables of Augeas, where 3000 oxen had been confined for many years. 6. To kill the carnivorous birds which ravaged the country near the lake Stympthalis in Arcadia. 7. To bring alive into Peloponnesus a prodigious wild bull, which laid waste the island Creta. 8. To bring the mares of Diomedes, which fed upon human flesh. 9. To obtain the girdle of the queen of the Amazons. 10. To kill the monster Geryon, king of Gades or Cadiz, and bring to Argos his numerous flocks, which fed upon human flesh. 11. To obtain apples from the garden of the Hesperides. 12. The last and most dangerous of his labours, to bring upon earth the three-headed dog Cerberus, which guarded the entrance of hell, to prevent the living from entering the infernal regions, and the dead from escaping from their confinement. His exploits are celebrated by the poets and historians of antiquity.—See Lempriere's Classical Dictionary.

‡ The Jubilee was the grand Sabbatical year of the Jews, celebrated after every seven septenaries of years; viz. every forty-ninth or fiftieth year, in commemoration of their deliverance out of Egypt. This was a year of general release, not only of all debts, like the common Sabbatical year, but of all slaves; and of all lands and possessions which had been sold or otherwise alienated from the families and tribes to which they originally belonged. Critics are not agreed about the etymology of the word יובל Jobel. Some derive it from Jabal, the inventor of musical instruments. Gen. iv. 21.; and suppose that this year was named after him, because it is a year of mirth and joy, on which music is a common attendant; or as we say in English, a joyful time; the word joyial being perhaps a corruption of the Hebrew word Johel; or else, because it was ushered in with the musical sound of the trumpet through the whole land. I here is another opinion, which bids as fair for probability as any, that Jobel comes from יביל, jabil. in hiphil חביל, hebil, which signifies to recall, restore, bring back, &c. because this restored all slaves to their liberty and brought back all alienated estates to the families to which they originally belonged. Accordingly, the Septuagint renders Jabel, ἀποσις, a remission, Lev. xxv. 10.; and see 8—19. And Josephus saith it signifies ἐλευθερία, liberty.—Josep. Antiq. Lib. III. cap. xii. sect. 3.—See Jennings' Jew. Antiq.

* In the strictest sense, this appellation יְהוּדִים, Jehudim, Ἰουδαῖοι, or Jews, belongs only to the posterity and tribe of Judah, after the defection of the ten tribes. Hebrews, in the full extent of the word, were the posterity of Abraham, the Hebrew; Israelites, the posterity of Jacob, or Israel; and Jews, the posterity of Judah, one of the sons of Israel. But after the division of Abraham and Israel's posterity into two kingdoms, under Rehoboam and Jeroboam, the one (under Rehoboam), was called the kingdom of Judah, because the tribe of Judah had the greater part of it, and also because the kings were of that tribe the other, (who revolted under Jeroboam), consisting of ten tribes, was called the kingdom of Israel. Hence arose a distinction between Jews and Israelites. But as the ten tribes were afterwards, in a manner, lost in the Assyrian captivity, and the kingdom of Judah only continued through succeeding ages as a body politic, the name Jews came to be applied indifferently to all Hebrews and Israelites, whether they belonged to the two tribes of Judah and Benjamin, or to the ten revolting tribes, whether they returned to Judea (as no doubt some of the ten, as well as of the two, tribes did, Ezra vi. 17.) or not.—*Jennings' Jew. by the ladies of old to knights. "To such (knights) as were victorious, prizes were awarded by the judges, and presented by the hands of ladies,—with ribbands, or scarfs, of chosen colours, called liveries. Those liveries are the ladies' favours spoken of in romance; and appear to have been the origin of the ribbands which still distinguish so many orders of knighthood."—Brydson's Summary of Heraldry. From the old cavaliers wearing the livery of their mistresses, the custom of people of quality making their servants wear a livery, to denote service, is supposed to be derived,—hence a particular dress; a garb worn as a token or consequence of any thing. Livery, in former days, thus seems also to have been used for a cockade. Livery, in London, denotes the collective body of liverymen, or the freemen of a company.—Johnson's Dict. by Todd.

* Locust, signifies, " (1.) a certain vile insect. Their nature is to be together, therefore vast multitudes are resembled by them, Nah. iii. 15. In Arabia, and other countries that are infested by them, they come in vast numbers upon their corn when ripe, and what they do not eat, they infect with their touch and their moisture coming from them; and afterwards dying in great numbers, they poison the air, and cause a pestilence. God plagued the Egyptians, by sending swarms of them into their land, Exod. x. 12—19. (2.) Either a large sort of grasshoppers, or a kind of green herb, Lev. xi. 22. Matth. iii. 4. (3.) Authors or teachers of false doctrine, who infect others by instilling their poisonous doctrines into them, Rev. ix. 3—11."—Cruden's Scrip. Concordance. "The Hebrews had several sorts of locusts, which are not known among us: the old historians and modern travellers remark, that locusts are very numerous in Africa, and many places of Asia; that sometimes they fall like a cloud upon the country, and eat up every thing they meet with. Moses describes four sorts of locusts, (Lev. xi. 21, 22.) Since there was a prohibition against using locusts, it is not to be questioned but that these creatures were commonly eaten in Palestine and the neighbouring countries."—Calmet.

§§ " Logarithms, which are the indexes of the ratios of numbers one to another, were first invented by Napier Lord Merchiston, (of Merchiston castle near Edinburgh,) a Scottish baron, and afterwards completed by Mr. Briggs, Savilian professor at Oxford. They are a series of artificial numbers, contrived for the expedition of calculation, and proceeding in an arithmetical proportion, as the numbers they answer to, do in a geometrical one: for instance,

0	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9
1	2	4	8	16	32	64	128	256	512.

Where the numbers above, beginning with (0), and arithmetically proportional, are logarithms. The addition and subtraction of logarithms, answers to the multiplication and division of the numbers they correspond with; and this saves an infinite deal of trouble. In like manner will the extraction of roots be performed, by dissecting the logarithms of any numbers for the square root, and trisecting them for the cube, and so on"—Hawis.

‖‖ Logic, the art of reasoning, or the art which teaches the right use of reason, and treats of the several operations of the mind which are employed in argumentation or reasoning, as memory, conception, abstraction, imagination, judgment, reason, or understanding; also, consciousness, perception, attention, association of ideas; all these are called the mental or intellectual faculties or powers of man. Logic is so called, because thinking is only an inward mental discourse, wherein the mind converses with itself. Logic, one of the seven sciences. (See foot-note on philology, page 214.)

§ Lustrate, to purify by sacrifice, as the censors did the city Rome, at the end of every four years, or rather fifty months, by going round taking an account or census of the citizens, and concluding the solemnity by sacrificing a son, a sheep, and a bull, to appease the gods, and purge the city.

|| Martin Luther, the leader of the Reformation of the sixteenth century, in Germany, was born in 1483, at Eisleben, in Saxony, of parents in humble circumstances ; at the early age of twenty years he obtained the degree of M.A. at the university of Erfurt, shortly after he retired from the world into a convent of the Augustinian friars (one of the mendicant orders,) and assumed their habit. Having found a copy of the Bible in the library of his monastery, he studied it with much assiduity and increased his reputation for sanctity so much, that he was chosen professor of philosophy and theology at Wittenberg, on the Elbe, where Frederic, Elector of Saxony had founded a university. In 1517 he openly attacked the Church of Rome and continued to war against it until his death in 1546.

§ Magnifico (Ital.) a grandee of Venice.
 || Mahomet, a noted Arabian impostor, was born 527,—his father a Pagan, his mother a Jewess,—began in 608 or 612, at Mecca, in Arabia, to declare himself a prophet, and, by the assistance of a Jew and a renegade Christian, formed a farrago of doctrines and rites, in which there was a mixture of Paganism, Judaism, and Christianity. By indulging his adherents in sensuality, ambition, and the love of booty, and promising them a caral heaven hereafter, he intoxicated the imagination, and seized the passions of his eastern followers. He propagated his religion by the sword, declaring that he who fought the battles and died in the field, in the defence of it, his sins, of whatever nature, or how ever enormous, being pardoned, was crowned with honour in the highest heaven. He died in the year 532.

** Metal, a simple, fixed, shining, opaque body or substance, insoluble in water fusible by heat, a good conductor of heat and electricity, capable, when in the state of an oxide, of uniting with acids and forming with them metallic salts. Many of the metals are also malleable, or extensible by the hammer, and some of them extremely ductile. Metals are mostly fossil, and are thirty in number. Twelve of these are malleable, viz. platina, gold, silver, mercury, lead, copper, tin, iron, zinc, palladium, nickel, and cadmium. The following sixteen are not sufficiently tenacious to bear extension by beating, viz. arsenic, antimony, bismuth, cobalt, manganese, tellurium, tantalum, columbium, molybden, tungsten, chrome, osmium, iridium, rhodium, uranium, and cerium. "They are compact bodies generated in the earth, heavy, hard, opaque, possessed of a remarkable lustre, fusible, and malleable in different degrees. There were originally reckoned but seven metals, viz. gold, silver, copper, tin, iron, lead, and quicksilver; but this number has since been increased to thirty, some of which have the metallic properties in a small degree. Of the primitive metals, gold is the heaviest; but platinum, one of the newly discovered metals, is found to be still heavier."—Crabb's Dictionary. The specific gravity of these metals is the following: Platina, when purified, is about 20 times heavier than water; gold, 19 times; mercury, in its native state, called quicksilver, 14 times; lead, 11 times; silver, 10 times; copper, 9 times; iron, 8 times; and tin, 7 times heavier than water.

§ Parody, a kind of writing, in which the words of an author, or his thoughts are, by some slight alterations, adapted to a different purpose; a kind of poetical pleasantry, in which verses written on one subject are altered and applied to another, by way of burlesque.

|| Prosody, that part of grammar which treats of the quantity of syllables, of accents, and of the laws of versification. It includes also the art of adjusting the accent and metrical arrangements of syllables in composition for the lyre.

¶ Psalmody, the act, art, or practice of singing sacred songs.

** Rhapsody, originally, a discourse in verse, sung or rehearsed by a rhapsodist; or a collection of verses, particularly those of Homer. In modern usage a collection of passages, thoughts, or authorities, composing a new piece, but without necessary dependence or natural connection.—Locke, Watts.

†† Tragedy, originally, a song or poem sung in honour of Bacchus, by a chorus of music, with dances and the sacrifice of a goat. A dramatical poem, representing some signal action performed by illustrious persons, and generally having a fatal issue. Æschylus is called the father of tragedy. A fatal and mournful event; any event in which human lives are lost by human violence, more particularly by unauthorized violence.

‡† Episode, in poetry, a separate incident, story, or action, introduced for the purpose of giving a greater variety to the events related in the poem; an incidental narrative, or digression, separable from the main subject, but naturally arising from it.

† Method, literally, according to a way; a suitable and convenient arrangement of things, proceedings, or ideas; way, manner, classification.

‡ Period, literally, a way or path round or about, a circuit; hence, the time which is taken up by a planet in making its revolution round the sun, or the duration of its course till it returns to the point of its orbit where it began. Thus the period of the earth, or its annual revolution, is 365 days, 6 hours, 9 months, and 30 seconds. In chronology, a stated number of years; a round of time, the end or conclusion, length of duration; the point that marks the end of a complete sentence, a full stop, thus (.)

§ Synod, in church history, a council, convention, or meeting of ecclesiastics, to consult on matters of religion. Synods are of four kinds, 1. General or ecumenical, which are composed of bishops from different nations. 2. National, in which the bishops of one nation only meet, to determine points of doctrine or discipline. 3. Provincial, in which the bishops of one province only meet. This is called a convocation. 4. Diocesan. In Scotland, a synod is composed of several adjoining presbyteries. The members are the ministers, and a ruling elder from each parish. In astronomy, a conjunction of two or more planets or stars in the same optical place of the heavens.

‖ Odontalgia, tooth-ache, or a pain in the teeth.

¶ Conoid, in geometry, a solid formed by the revolution of a conic section about its axis. If the conic section is a parabola, the resulting solid is a parabolic conoid, or paraboloid; if a hyperbola, the solid is a hyperbolic conoid, or hyperboloid; if an ellipse, an elliptic conoid, a spheroid, or an ellipsoid. In anatomy, a gland in the third ventricle of the brain, resembling a cone or pineapple, and called the pineal gland.

** Cycloid, a geometrical curve, on which depends the doctrine of pendulums; a figure made by the upper end of a diameter of a circle, turning about a right line. The genesis of a cycloid may be conceived, by imagining a nail in the circumference of a wheel; the line which the nail describes in the air, while the wheel revolves in a right line, is a cycloid.

PELL-o, pulsum, v. 3. to drive, to strike: as, compel', to drive together, or urge with forcè; dispel', to drive asunder, to disperse; expul'sion, the act of driving out; repel'lent, driving back.

* Archipelago, in a general sense, a sea interspersed with many isles; but particularly the sea which separates Europe from Asia on the south-east,—so named, probably, because being the greatest sea which the ancient Greeks were accustomed to navigate,—otherwise called the Ægean sea. It contains the Grecian isles, called Cyclades and Sporades.

† Pelagian, pertaining to the sea. Also a follower of Pelagius, a monk of Bangor, a native of Great Britain, who, in the latter part of the fourth century, or at the beginning of the fifth, formed his schism. He denied original sin, and maintained the doctrine of free will and the merit of good works.

‡ Pelican, a large bird. There are two sorts of pelicans; one lives upon the water, and feeds upon fish; the other keeps in deserts, and feeds upon serpents and other reptiles; the pelican has a peculiar tenderness for its young; it generally places its nest upon a craggy rock; the pelican is supposed to admit its young to suck blood from its breast.—Calmet. A glass vessel used by chemists; written also pellicane and pelecan.

§ Pelisse, originally, a furred robe or coat; but the name is now given to a silk coat or habit worn by ladies.

‖ Pell, a skin or hide. In England, clerk of the pells, an officer of the exchequer who enters every teller's bill on the parchment rolls, the roll of receipts and the roll of disbursements.

† Compellation, literally, the act of sending or driving out the voice; style or manner of address, the word of salutation.

‡ Pulse or Pulsation, in animals, the beating or throbbing of the heart and arteries, in the process of carrying on the circulation of the blood. The blood being propelled by the contraction of the heart, causes the arteries to dilate, so as to render each dilatation perceptible to the touch in certain parts of the body,—as, in the radial artery, &c. More particularly, the pulse is the sudden dilatation of an artery, caused by the projectile force of the blood, which is perceptible to the touch. Hence we say, to feel the pulse. The pulse is frequent or rare, quick or slow, equal or unequal, regular or intermitting, hard or soft, strong or weak, &c. The pulses of an adult in health are little more than one pulse to a second; in certain fevers, the numbering is increased to 90, 100, or even to 140 in a minute. The stroke with which a medium is affected by the motion of light, sound, &c.; oscillation; vibration. To feel one's pulse, metaphysically, to sound one's opinion; to try or to know one's mind. Pulse, literally, beaten out as seeds; leguminous plants or their seeds; the plants whose pericarp is a legume or pod,—as, beans, peas, &c.

* Apophasis, in rhetoric, a waiving or omission of what one, speaking ironically, would plainly insinuate,—as, “I will not mention another argument, which, however, if I should, you could not refute.”

† Epiphany, a Christian festival celebrated on 6th Jan. the 12th day after Christmas, in commemoration of the appearance of our Saviour to the wise men or philosophers of the east who came to adore him with presents; or of the manifestation of Christ to the Gentiles. The Greek fathers use the word for the appearance of Christ in the world, the sense in which Paul uses the word, 2 Tim. i. 10.

‡ Euphemism, in rhetoric, a figure in which a harsh or indelicate word or expression is softened, or rather by which a delicate word or expression is substituted for one which is offensive to good manners, or to delicate ears.

§ Phantasm or fantasm, Phantasy or fancy, Phantom or fantom, that which appears to the mind, the image of an external object,—hence an idea or notion. It usually denotes a vain or airy appearance, a spectre or apparition.

|| Fancy, the faculty by which the mind forms images or representations of things at pleasure. It is often used as synonymous with imagination; but imagination is rather the power of combining and modifying our conceptions.—Stewart. An opinion or notion; taste, conception, image, thought; inclination, liking; caprice, humour, whim.

¶ Phæton, in mythology, the son of Phœbus and Clymene, or of Cephalus and Aurora, that is, the son of light or of the sun. This aspiring youth begged of Phœbus that he would permit him to guide the chariot of the sun, in doing which he manifested want of skill, and being struck with a thunderbolt by Jupiter, he was hurled headlong into the river Po. This fable probably originated in the appearance of a comet with a splendid train, which passed from the sight in the north-west of Italy and Greece. An open carriage like a chaise, on four wheels, and drawn by horses. In ornithology, a genus of fowls, the tropic bird.

** Phase or Phasis, an appearance; appropriately, any appearance or quantity of illumination of the moon or other planet.

†† Phenogamian, in botany, having the organs of fructification visible.

†† Phenomenon, an appearance; any thing visible; whatever is presented to the eye by observation or experiment, or whatever is discovered to exist,—as, the phenomena of the natural world, the phenomena of the heavenly bodies, or of terrestrial substances; the phenomena of heat or of colour. It sometimes denotes a remarkable or unusual appearance.

* Prophasis, in medicine, prognosis; foreknowledge of a disease.

† Sycophant, originally, an informer against those who stole figs, or exported them contrary to law, &c. Hence in time it came to signify a tale-bearer, or informer in general; hence, a parasite, a mean flatterer, especially of princes or great men; hence a deceiver, an impostor. Its most general use is in the sense of an obsequious flatterer or parasite.

‡ Pharisee, one of a sect among the Jews, whose religion consisted in a strict observance of rites and ceremonies, and of the traditions of the elders, and whose pretended holiness led them to separate themselves as a sect, considering themselves as more righteous than other Jews.

§ Alexipharmic, expelling poison, antidotal; that has the quality of expelling poison or infection by sweat.

‖ Pharmacopœia or Pharmacopy, a dispensatory; a book or treatise describing the preparations of the several kinds of medicines, with their uses and manner of application.

* Paraphernalia, the goods which a wife brings with her at her marriage, or which she possesses beyond her dower or jointure, and which remain at her disposal after her husband's death. Such are her apparel and her ornaments, over which the executors have no control, unless when the assets are insufficient to pay the debts.—Blackstone.

‡ Anaphora, a figure in rhetoric, when the same word or words are repeated at the beginning of two or more succeeding verses or clauses of a sentence,—as, "Where is the wise? Where is the scribe? Where is the disputer of this world?" Among physicians, the discharge of blood or purulent matter by the mouth.

§ Diaphoresis, literally, a carrying through; augmented perspiration; or an elimination of the humours of the body through the pores of the skin.

‖ Epiphora, the watery eye; a disease in which the tears, from increased secretion, or an obstruction in the lachrymal duct, accumulate in front of the eye, and trickle over the cheek.

‡ Metaphor, a short similitude; a similitude reduced to a single word; or a word expressing similitude without the signs of comparison. Thus, "that man is a fox," is a metaphor; but "that man is like a fox," is a similitude or comparison. In metaphor, the similitude is contained in the name; a man is a fox, means, a man is as crafty as a fox. So we say, a man bridles his anger; beauty awakens love or tender passions; opposition fires courage.

** Periphery, the circumference of a circle, ellipsis, or other regular curvilinear figure.

‡‡ Philippic, an oration of Demosthenes, the Grecian orator, against Philip, king of Macedon, and father of Alexander the Great, in which the orator inveighs against the indolence of the Athenians. Hence the word is used to denote any discourse or declaration full of acrimonious invectives. The four-teen orations of Cicero against Mark Anthony are also called Philippics.

* Philadelphia, the chief city of Pennsylvania.—so called, from the brotherly love of its first inhabitants, who were of the sect called Quakers, or Society of Friends.

† Philology, primarily, a love of words, or a desire to know the origin and construction of language. In a general sense, that branch of literature which comprehends a knowledge of the etymology or origin, and combination of words; grammar, the construction of sentences or use of words in language; criticism, the interpretation of authors, the affinities of different languages, and whatever relates to the history or present state of languages. It sometimes includes  rhetoric, poetry, history, and antiquities.

‡ Philosophy, literally, the love of wisdom. But in modern acceptation, philosophy is a general term, denoting an explanation of the reasons of things, or an investigation of the causes of phenomena both of mind and of matter. When applied to any particular department of knowledge, it denotes the collection of general laws or principles under which all the subordinate phenomena or facts relating to that subject are comprehended. Thus, that branch of philosophy which treats of God, &c. is called theology; that which treats of nature is called physics or natural philosophy; that which treats of man is called logic and ethics, or moral philosophy; that which treats of the mind is called intellectual or mental philosophy, or metaphysics. The objects of philosophy are to ascertain facts or truth, and the causes of things, or their phenomena; to enlarge our views of God and his works, and to render our knowledge of both practically useful, and subservient to human happiness.

§ Philter, a potion intended or adapted to excite love; a charm to excite love.

† Epiphysis or Epiphysy, accretion; the growing of one bone to another by simple contiguity, without a proper articulation. The spongy extremity of a bone.

‡ Metaphysics, literally, after physics; (reckoned first in the order of studies by Aristotle, and the science of mind and intelligence the second), the science of the principle and causes of all things existing; hence, the science of mind and intelligence. This science comprehends ontology, cosmology, anthroposophy, psychology, pneumatology, and metaphysical theology, being the ancient division of metaphysics. The natural and modern division of things that exist is into body and mind, things material and immaterial. The former belong to physics, and the latter to the science of metaphysics.

§ Monophysite, one who maintains that Jesus Christ had but one nature, or that the human and divine nature were so united as to form one nature only.

|| Neophyte, a new convert or proselyte; a name given by the early Christians to such heathens as had recently embraced the Christian faith, and were considered as regenerated by baptism; a novice, one newly admitted to the order of priest; a tyro, a beginner in learning.

† Symphysis, in anatomy, the union of bones by cartilage; a connection of bones without a moveable joint. In surgery, a coalescence of a natural passage, also, the first intention of cure in a wound.

** Phytolite, a plant petrified, or fossil vegetable.

†† Zoophyte, in natural history, a body supposed to partake of the nature both of an animal and a vegetable,—such as madrepores, millipores, corallines, &c.

* Pilgrim, in Scripture, one that has only a temporary residence on earth, Heb. xi.

† Compile, literally, to pick out, select, and put together; to collect parts or passages of books or writings into a book or pamphlet; to select and put together parts of an author, or collect parts of different authors; or to collect and arrange separate papers, laws, or customs, in a book, code, or system: to write, to compose.

‡ Pillage, to strip of money or goods by open violence; to plunder. It differs from stealing, as it implies open violence, and from robbery, which may be committed by one individual on another; whereas pillaging is usually the act of bands or numbers. To pillage and to rob are, however, sometimes used synonymously.

§ Picts, ancient inhabitants of Scotland,—so called, because they painted their bodies, that they might appear formidable to their enemies.

|| Pigment, paint; a preparation used by painters, dyers, &c. to impart colours to bodies.

* Privateer, a ship of war fitted out by private individuals, to seize or plunder the ships of an enemy in war.

† Privative, taking away; consisting in the absence of something; not positive. Privative is in things, what negative is in propositions,—as, privative blessings, safeguard, liberty, and integrity. In grammar, a prefix to a word, which changes its signification, and gives it a contrary sense,—as, a (Gr.) in abyss, a bottomless gulph; un (Eng.) in unwise, not wise; in (Lat.) in inhuman, not human. The word may also be applied to affixes,—as, less, in harmless, without harm.

‡ Privilege, literally and originally, a private law; a peculiar benefit or advantage, right or immunity, enjoyed by a person, company, or society, not common to others.

§ Privy, private, secret, privately knowing; a necessary house. In law, a partaker, a person having an interest in any action or thing,—as, privy in blood.

‖ Privy-chamber, in Great Britain, the private apartment in a royal residence or mansion. Gentlemen of the privy-chamber, are servants of the king, who are to wait and attend on him and the queen at court, in their diversions, &c. They are 48 in number, under the lord chamberlain.

‡ Privy-council of a king consists of a number of distinguished persons selected by him, to advise him in the administration of government.—Blackstone.

** Privy-counsellors, members of the privy-council. They are made by the king's nomination, without patent or grant.

‡ Comprobate, to agree in approving, to concur in testimony.

‡ Disapprove, to dislike, to condemn in opinion or judgment, to censure as wrong.

§ Disprove, to prove to be false or erroneous, to confute.—as, to disprove an assertion, a statement, an argument, a proposition.

‖ Improbate, to disallow, not to approve.

* Assecution, an obtaining or acquiring.

† Consectary, following, consequent.

‡ Consequence, that which follows from any act, cause, principle, or series of actions; hence, an event or effect, produced by some preceding act or cause; influence, importance.

§ Consequential, following as the effect; important. Conceited, pompous,—applied to persons.

|| Ensuite, to follow; to follow in a train of events or course of time, to come after.

†† Executioner, one who follows out or carries into effect a judgment of death.

** Executor, the person appointed by the testator to execute or follow out his will, or to see it carried into effect.

††† Exequies, Obsequies, funeral rites and solemnities; funeral procession.

‡† Insectator, a persecutor.

§§ Obsequious, promptly obedient or submissive to the will of another; compliant; servilely or meanly condescending or complying.

||| Persecute, to pursue in a manner to injure, vex, or afflict; to afflict, harass, or destroy unjustly, for adherence to a particular creed or system of religious principles, or to a mode of worship. Thus Nero the Roman emperor persecuted the Christians by crucifying some, burning others, and condemning others to be worried by dogs.—See Acts xxii.

†††† Prosecute, literally, to follow forward, to follow or pursue with a view to reach, execute, or accomplish; to continue efforts already begun. This word signifies either to begin and carry on, or simply to continue what has been begun; to seek to obtain by legal process. Prosecute differs from persecute, as in law it is applied to the legal proceedings only, whereas persecute implies cruelty, injustice, or oppression.

* Stricture, a stroke, a glance, a touch; a touch of criticism, critical remark, censure; a drawing, a spasmodic or other morbid contraction of any passage of the body.

† Anastrophe, in grammar, an inversion of the natural order of words,—as, saxa per et scopulos, for per saxa et scopulos.

‡ Antistrophe, in grammar, the changing of things mutually depending on each other; reciprocal conversion;—as, the master of the servant; the servant of the master.

‖ Apostrophe, in rhetoric, a diversion of speech; a digressive address; a changing the course of a speech, and addressing a person who is dead or absent, as if present. When an advocate, in an argument to the jury, turns and addresses a few remarks to the court. In Grammar, the contraction of a word by the omission of a letter or letters, marked by a comma,—as call'd for called. The comma used for this purpose may also be called an apostrophe.

¶ Catastrophe, the change or revolution which produces the final event of a dramatic piece; or the unfolding and winding up of the plot, clearing up difficulties, and closing the play. The ancients divided a play into the protasis, epitasis, catastasis, and catastrophy; the introduction, continuance, heightening, and development or conclusion. A final event, conclusion; generally, an unfortunate conclusion, calamity, or disaster.

** Epistrophe, a figure in rhetoric, in which several successive sentences end with the same word or affirmation.

†† Strophe, in Greek poetry, a stanza; the first member of a poem. This is succeeded by a similar stanza called antistrophe. The ancient odes consisted of stanzas called strophies and antistrophies, to which was often added the epode. These were sung by a choir, which turned or changed places when they repeated the different parts of the ode. The epode was sung as the chorus stood still.

‡‡ Struma, a glandular swelling; scrofula; the king's evil; a wen.

† Souler, a shoemaker or cobbler.

† Sutile, done by stitching.

‡ Suture, the sewing of a wound; the seam or joint which unites the bones of the skull; or the peculiar articulation or connection of those bones.|| Sybaritic, belonging to the Sybarites, or inhabitants of Sybaris, a town in Italy, who were proverbially voluptuous; hence, luxurious, wanton.

† Sycamore, a species of fig-tree.

** Sycite, fig-stone,—a name given to nodules of flint or pebbles, which resemble a fig.†† Sycophant, originally, an informer against those who stole figs, or exported them contrary to law, &c. Hence, in time, it came to signify a tale-bearer or informer, in general; hence, a parasite; a mean flatterer; especially a flatterer of princes and great men; hence, a deceiver, an impostor. Its most general use is in the sense of an obsequious flatterer or parasite.‡† Asylum, a sanctuary, or place of refuge, where criminals and debtors shelter themselves from justice, and from which they cannot be taken without sacrilege. Temples and altars were anciently asylums; as were tombs, statues, and monuments. The ancient heathens allowed asylums for the protection of the vilest criminals; and the Jews had their cities of refuge.—Josh. xx. 7 to 9
Any place of retreat and security.

§§ Syringa, a genus of plants, the lilac.

‡‡‡ Syringe, an instrument for injecting liquids into animal bodies, &c.; or an instrument in the form of a pump, serving to imbibe any fluid, and then to expel it with force.

TACT-os (τακτός, ἀ τάσσω, to place in order), placed or put in order, arranged.

* Tabernacle, among the Jews, a kind of tent to take up or down, as occasion required; which was as it were the palace of the Most High, the dwelling of the God of Israel; wherein the Israelites, during their journeyings in the wilderness, performed the chief of their religious exercises, offered their sacrifices, and worshipped. It was 30 cubits long, and 10 in breadth and in height. It was divided into two partitions. The first was called, THE HOLY PLACE, which was 20 cubits long, and 10 wide; here were placed the table of show-bread, the golden candlestick, and the golden altar of incense. The second was called THE MOST HOLY PLACE, whose length was 10 cubits, and breadth 10, wherein, before the building of the temple, the ark of the covenant was kept, which was a symbol of God's gracious presence with the Jewish Church. The MOST HOLY was divided from the HOLY PLACE by a curtain or veil of very rich cloth.—Exod. xxvi. Heb. ix. 2, 3.—Cruden. A tent or pavilion, a temporary dwelling; a place of worship, a sacred place; our natural body, in which the soul lodges as in a tabernacle; the tokens of God's gracious presence.

TANT-us, a. so great, so much, equivalent.

* Attain, to come to or reach; to gain, to compass,—always followed by to. This word always implies an effort towards an object. Hence it is not synonymous with obtain and procure, which do not necessarily imply such effort. We procure or obtain a thing by purchase or loan, and we obtain by inheritance, but we do not attain it by such means.

† Contagion, literally, a touch or touching. Hence, the communication of a disease by contact; or the matter communicated. The small-pox, measles, anginas, malignant fevers, are communicated by the breath of the diseased, by the perspiration, or other excretions.

‡ Contingent, falling or coming by chance, that is, without design or expectation on our part; accidental, casual.

§ Integer, literally, not touched, the whole of any thing; a whole number,—opposed to a fraction.

|| Integrant, making part of a whole.

† Integrate, to renew, to restore, to perfect, to make a thing entire.

** Redintegrate, to make whole again, to renew, to restore to a perfect state.

†† Tact, touch, feeling; peculiar skill or faculty; nice perception or discernment.

†† Tangent, in geometry, a right line which touches a curve, but which, when produced, does not cut it.

§§ Tantalus, in fable, was condemned for his crimes to perpetual hunger and thirst, in hell, with food and water near him, which he could not reach; hence, tantalize, to tease or torment, by presenting some good to the view, and exciting desire, but continually frustrating the expectations by keeping that good out of reach; to tease, to torment.

* Extemporal, Extemporaneous, Extemporary, or Extempore, made or uttered out of, or at the time, or without premeditation or previous study.

† Intempestive, untimely, unseasonable.

‡ Tempest, literally, time; an extensive current of wind rushing with great velocity and violence; a storm of extreme violence,—usually applied to a steady wind of long continuance; but we say also of a tornado, it blew a tempest. The currents of wind are named, according to their respective degrees of force or rapidity, a breeze, a gust, a gale, a storm, a tempest, a tornado, a hurricane; but gale is also used as synonymous with storm, and storm with tempest. Gust is usually applied to a sudden blast of short duration. Hurricane is the most violent storm of wind. A tempest may or may not be attended with rain, snow, or hail. Also, a violent tumult or commotion; perturbation, violent agitation.

§ Temporal, pertaining to this life or world, or the body only; secular,—opposed to spiritual, ecclesiastical, and eternal. Also, belonging to a tense; also, pertaining to the temple or temples of the head.

|| Temporals, Temporalities, secular possessions; revenues of an ecclesiastic proceeding from lands, tenements, or lay fees, tithe, and the like,—opposed to spiritualities.

† Temporary, lasting for a time only.

** Time-keeper, or Time-piece, a clock, watch, or other chronometer.

†† Attend, to stretch to or towards, to regard, to listen, to fix the mind on; to go with or accompany; to await, to wait on.

* Prosthetic, prefixed, as a letter to a word.

† Synthesis, composition, or the putting of two or more things together,—as, in compound medicines. In Logic, composition, or that process of reasoning in which we advance by a regular chain from principles before established or assumed, and propositions already proved, till we arrive at the conclusion. Synthesis is the opposite of analysis or resolution. In Surgery, the operation by which divided parts are re-united. In Chemistry, the uniting of elements into a compound; the opposite of analysis, which is the separation of a compound into its constituent parts. That water is a compound of oxygen and hydrogen, is proved both by analysis and synthesis.

‡ Theme, a subject or topic on which a person writes or speaks. A short dissertation composed by a student; the original word whence others are derived; the root.

§ Thesis, a position, a theme, a subject; something laid down affirmatively or negatively. In Logic, every proposition may be divided into thesis and hypothesis. Thesis contains the thing affirmed or denied, and hypothesis the condition of the affirmation or negation.

|| Thorax, in anatomy, that part of the human skeleton, which consists of the bones of the chest; also, the cavity of the chest.

¶ Enthymeme, in rhetoric, an argument consisting of only two propositions, an antecedent and a consequent deduced from it,—as, we are dependent creatures, therefore we should be humble. Here the major proposition is suppressed; the complete syllogism would be, dependent creatures should be humble, we are dependent creatures, therefore we should be humble.

† Timorous, fearful of dangers; indicating fear, full of scruples.

‡ Timocracy, government by men of property, who are possessed of a certain income.

§ Attainder, a staining, a corruption of blood; hence, the judgment or sentence upon a person convicted of treason or felony, which attaints, taints, or corrupts his blood, so that he can no longer inherit lands.

|| Mezzotinto, a particular manner of engraving, or representation of figures on copper, in imitation of painting in Indian ink.

† Taint, to imbue, to stain, to tarnish; to corrupt, to infect, to poison.

** Tinct, Tincture, Tinge, Tint, colour, dye, shade, taste; or rather a slight degree of some colour, taste, or something foreign, infused into another substance or mixture, or added to it.

†† Tickle, to touch lightly, and cause a peculiar thrilling sensation which can not be described. A slight sensation of this kind may give pleasure, but when violent, it is insufferable. To please by slight gratification.

* Entitle, to give a title to; to give or prefix a name or appellation; to superscribe or prefix as a title;—hence, as titles are evidences of claims or property, to give a claim to; to give a right to demand or receive; to qualify; to dignify by a title or honourable appellation.

† Titular, Titulary, consisting in a title or name only; pertaining to a title.

‡ Tobacco, a plant, a native of America, much used for smoking and chewing, and in snuff,—so named, from Tobaco, a province of Yucatan, in Spanish America, where it was first found by the Spaniards. But this account of its origin is very doubtful. Las Casas says, that in the first voyage of Columbus, the Spaniards saw in Cuba many persons smoking dry herbs or leaves rolled up in tubes called tobacos. Charlevoix, in his history of St. Dominique, says, that the instrument used in smoking was called tobaco.

author of the division of the Old Testament into verses, is not ascertained. The New Testament was divided into verses by Robert Stephens. Also, to tell in verse, to relate poetically ; to be versed (à ursor, to be employed in, Lat.) to be well skilled, to be acquainted with.

**Versicle*, a little verse.

†Versicolor, having various colours, changeable in colour.

‡Versicular, pertaining to verses, designating distinct divisions of a writing.

§Versification, the act, art, or practice of composing verses. Versification is the result of art, labour, and rule, rather than of invention or the fire of genius.

‖Version, a turning, change ; translation, that which is rendered from another language.

††Vertebre or Vertebra, a joint of the spine or back-bone of an animal.

***Vertex*, the zenith, the top of any thing.

††Vertical, placed or being in the zenith, or perpendicularly over the head, perpendicular to the horizon.

††Verticle or Verticil, in botany, a little whirl ; a mode of inflorescence, in which the flowers surround the stem in a kind of ring.

§§Verticity, the power of turning, revolution, rotation ; that property of the loadstone, by which it turns to some particular point.

‖‖Vertigo, literally, a turning round or whirling ; giddiness, dizziness or swimming of the head.

†††Vortex, a whirling or circular motion of water, a whirlpool ; a whirling of the air, a whirlwind. In the Cartesian system, the circular motion originally impressed on the particles of matter, carrying them round their own axis, and round a common centre. By means of these vortices Descartes attempted to account for the formation of the universe.

****Aver*, to assert confidently ; to affirm with confidence.

†††Verdict, literally, true declaration ; the report of a jury

†††Verify, to prove to be true ; to confirm, to fulfil.

§§§Very, true, real ; also, in a great degree, an eminent or high degree, but not generally the highest.

*Vesicant, Vesicatory, a blistering application, plaster ; an epispastic.

†Vesicate, to blister, to raise little bladders, or separate the cuticle by inflaming the skin.

‡Vesicle, a little bladder, or a portion of the cuticle separated from the skin, and filled with some humor.

§Vesper, the evening star, Venus ; also, the evening. Vespers, in the plural, the evening song or evening service in the Romish Church.

‖Vestal, pertaining to Vesta, the goddess of fire among the Romans, and a virgin ; hence, pure, chaste ; also, a virgin consecrated to Vesta, and to the service of watching the sacred fire, which was to be punctually kept burning upon her altar. The Vestals were six in number, and they made a vow of perpetual virginity.

‡Vestibule, the porch or entrance into a house, or a large open space before the door, but covered. Vestibules, for magnificence, are usually between the court and garden ; an apartment in large buildings, which presents itself into a hall or suit of rooms or offices.

*Investigate, to search into as by tracks or footsteps ; to inquire or examine into with care and accuracy ; to find out by careful disquisition.

††Pervestigate, to find out by research.

‡†Circumvest, to cover round, as with a garment.

§§Devest or Divest, to strip of clothes, arms or equipage, of any thing that covers, surrounds, or attends ; to deprive,—opposed to invest. Devest is appropriately used as a technical term in law.

‖‖‖Investiture, the action of giving possession, or livery of seizin ; the right of giving possession of any manor, office, or benefice.

* Revestiary, the place or apartment in a church or temple, where the dresses are deposited, a sacristy; now contracted into vestry.

† Revetment, (Fr.) in fortification, a strong wall on the outside of a rampart, intended to support the earth.

‡ Vestment, a garment. Vesture, a garment or robe; dress, garments; clothing, covering.

§ Vestry, a room appendant to a church, in which the sacerdotal vestments and sacred utensils are kept, and where parochial meetings are held. (See Revestiary, and Sacristy, p. 376.)

|| Veto, literally, I forbid; a forbidding, or the right of forbidding,—applied to the right of a king, or other magistrate or officer, to withhold his assent to the enactment of a law, or the passing of a decree. Thus, the king of Great Britain has a veto upon every act of parliament. It was originally appropriated to the tribunes of the people in Rome, when they interposed their negative to any law or public act. It properly signifies, a hindering by words.

† Inveterate, old, deep-rooted, firmly established by long continuance, obstinate,—used of evils. Having fixed habits by long continuance,—used of persons.

** Veteran, one who has been long exercised in any service or art, particularly in war; one who has grown old in service, and has had much experience.

‡† Vezil, a flag or standard; in botany, the upper petal of a papilionaceous flower.

‡‡ Vexillary, a standard-bearer; pertaining to an ensign or standard.

§§ Vexillation, a company of troops under one ensign.

||| Bivious, having two ways, or leading two ways.

‡‡‡ Convoy, n. a protecting force accompanying ships or property on their way from place to place, either by sea or land. The ship or thing protected or conveyed. When persons are to be protected, the word escort is used.

*** Envoy, a person deputed by a prince or government, to negotiate a treaty, or transact other business, with a foreign prince or government. We usually apply the word to a public minister sent on a special occasion, or for one particular purpose; hence, an envoy is distinguished from an ambassador or permanent resident at a foreign court, and is of inferior rank.

*** Advice, counsel ; an opinion recommended or offered, as worthy to be followed ; information, notice, intelligence.

††† Advise, to give counsel to ; to give information ; to deliberate, to consider.

††† Envy, literally, a seeing against, that is, a looking with enmity, pain, uneasiness, mortification, or discontent, at the superior condition and happiness of another, accompanied with some degree of hatred or malignity, and usually with a desire or an effort to depreciate the person, and with pleasure in seeing him depressed. Envy springs from pride, ambition, or love, mortified that another has obtained what one has a strong desire to possess. Emulation differs from envy, in not being accompanied with hatred, and a desire to depress a more fortunate person.

* Viable, capable of living,—as a new-born infant or premature child.

† Vvand, meat dressed, food,—so called, because food supports life (It is used chiefly in the plural.)

‡ Victuals, food for human beings, prepared for eating; that which supports human life; provisions, meat, sustenance.

§ Vivacity, the being lively or active, liveliness; air of life and activity; life, animation, spirits.

‖ Vivary, a warren; a place for keeping living animals,—as, a pond, a park, &c.

‡ Vivid, lively, sprightly, active; bright, strong.

** Vivific, giving life, reviving, enlivening.

†† Viviparous, producing young in a living state,—as, all mammals or such animals as have breasts for nourishing their young, as distinguished from oviparous, producing eggs, or young from eggs,—as fowls.

‡‡ Advocate, one who pleads the cause of another in a court of justice. We say, a man is a learned lawyer and an able advocate. Lord advocate, in Scotland, is the principal crown lawyer, or prosecutor of crimes. Faculty of Advocates, in Scotland, is a society of eminent lawyers, who practise in the highest courts, and who are admitted members only upon the severest examination, at three different times. It consists of about two hundred members, and from this body are vacancies on the bench usually supplied.

§§ Avocation, the act of calling aside; the business which calls aside. (The use of this word for vocation, is very improper.)

‖‖ Avouch, to affirm, to declare or assert with positiveness; to produce or call in, to affirm in favour of, to maintain or support.

‡‡ Equivocal, being of doubtful signification, that may be understood in different senses, doubtful, ambiguous.

* Volcanize, to subject to, or cause to undergo volcanic heat, and to be affected by its action.

† Promulge (a pro & vulgus), to promulgate, to publish or teach. (Less used than promulgate.)

‡ Vulgar, the common people. (It has no plural termination, but has often a plural verb.) Also, pertaining to the common unlettered people.

§ Vulgate, a very ancient Latin version of the Scriptures, and the only one which the Romish Church admits to be authentic.—So called, from its common use in the Latin Church.

|| Vulnerary, useful in healing wounds; also, any plant, drug, or composition, useful in the cure of wounds.

¶ Wonder, 1. That emotion which is excited by novelty, or the presentation to the sight or mind, of something new, unusual, strange, great, extraordinary or not well understood; something that arrests the attention by its novelty, grandeur, or inexplicableness. Wonder expresses less than astonishment, and much less than admiration. It differs from admiration, in not being necessarily accompanied with love, esteem, or approbation, nor directed to persons. But wonder sometimes is nearly allied to astonishment, and the exact extent of the meaning of such words can hardly be graduated. 2. Cause of wonder, that which excites surprise; a strange thing, a prodigy, a miracle.—The seven wonders of the world were the Egyptian pyramids; the mausoleum erected by Artemisia; the Temple of Diana at Ephesus; the walls and hanging gardens of Babylon; the colossus at Rhodes; the statue of Jupiter Olympian; and the Pharos or watch-tower of Alexandria.—(See Lempriere's Class. Dict.)

††† Zumology, a treatise on the fermentation of liquors, or the doctrine of fermentation.

‡‡‡ Zumosimeter, an instrument proposed by Swammerdam, for ascertaining the degree of fermentation occasioned by the mixture of different liquids, and the degree of heat which they acquire in fermentation.

§§§ Zygodactylous, having the toes disposed in pairs,—distinguishing an order of fowls which have the feet furnished with two toes before, and two behind,—as the parrot, woodpecker, &c.—Edin. Encyc.

A KEY

TO THE

LATIN, GREEK, AND OTHER ROOTS.

THE following key has been prepared to assist the pupil in analyzing the compound words, and in ascertaining the etymology of others, in which the form is very unlike that of its root. All the leading words are here alphabetically arranged, and the roots from which they are derived placed opposite to them. By leading words we mean those from which others are formed by the addition of ordinary terminations. Thus, secure is given, while securely, security, &c., are omitted; and if accumulation or accumulative is sought, accumulate alone will be found in the key. Those only, however, have been omitted, which are very obviously formed from those included in the key. The roots in parentheses are a few not found in the general collection, but which are necessary to the complete analysis of the words with which they are placed.
